By STEVEN R. WEISMAN

The Municipal Assistance Corporation found itself engulfed yesterday by a huge, unexpected demand for its new bondsspurred by what financial officials said was new investor confidence in New York City produced in part by the election of Jimmy Carter on Tuesday.

As a result, the M.A.C. was able to announce that it had found customers in the nationwide credit markets, from which it had been barred since the height of the fiscal crisis in mid-1975, for all $250 million of its new securities, at an interest rate lower than had been expected only a few days ago. As recently as last Friday, officials of the Assistance Corporation planned to try to sell only $110 million of the new bonds to the public, out of fear that there was no market for all of the $250 million issue. "Time for a Change"

After their often ascerbic contest, Mr. Carter today struck a note of conciliation toward Mr. Ford, saying he would work closely with him through the period of transition and interpreting the closeness of the vote Tuesday as a sign of respect and approval for the President.

"But many people thought It was time for a change," he added, and said that their ballots would serve as the base for his extensive blueprint for changing the

Lebanese Leader Names Moslem As Head of the Arab Peace Force

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Nov. 4-President Eliaa Sarkis today appointed a Moslem officer in the Lebanese Army, Col. Ahmed al-Haji, as commander of the Arab peacekeeping force that is expected to take up duties io the country in the next few

The President's choice of Colonel Hair was seen here as his first major step to put into effect the peace proposals approved late last month by Arab leaders at meetings in Egypt and Saodi Arabia. The appointment is expected to be followed no later than this weekend by a takeover of peacekeeping duties by the 30,000-member force, which will probably be dominated by Syrian troops.

The choice of Colonel Hajj was also seen here as an attempt to reconcile the positions of the Moslem-leftist-Palestiman coalition on one side, and the rightist Christians on the other. The Christiana have generally been abiding by a cease-fire declared two weeks ago after more than a year and a half of civil war.

Colonel Haji, although not a favortie of the Lebaneae left, is expected to ha less vulnerable to leftist criticism than a Chriatian officer would have been. Also, Colonel Haij, who remained neutral dur-iog the civil war, was said to have close contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization. a firm indication that the Conservatives, who have been running slightly ahead of the governing Labor Party in nationwide opinion polls, could regain office if a general election were held now.

Prime Minister James Callaghan is not legally required to call an election until 1979, but a series of major defeats on Important issues in the House of Com-mons could force his hand.

Opposition Holds More Seats

The results do no mean that the Government faces inevitable parliamentary reverses, even though it is a minority arithmetically. After tonight's results, Labor has 312 votes in the House of Commons, compared with 323 for the comoined opposition forces. Most of these are Tories, who now number 280.

The opposition, which includes sesplinter parties, is so fragmented that the Government is usually able to put together a winning combination. But Labor's situation is now more precarious than it was before.

The results also gave a great psychological hoost to the conservatives and particularly to their leader, Margaret Thatcher, who stirred up election fever with a strong speech at the annual party conference in Brighton early last month.

Mrs. Thatcher, who watched the results from her home in London, said: "I am thrilled with the triumphant conservative gains. There is no substitute for victory. The results have shown that we conserva-tives are in touch with and in tune with the hearts of the people."

Gesture of Dissatisfaction

Most observers saw the results not so much as a vindication of Conservative policies as a gesture of dissatisfaction with the inability of the Labor Government to correct Bitain's economic troubles.

Of Smuggling Cash Proposition which include deterioration in the value of the currency, an inflation ate of 14 per-cent a year and high unemployment, all aggravated by severe limitations on wage increases imposed last year.

Privately most Conservatives scknowledge that they themselves would have taken the steps imposed the Labor Government to resist inflation and impress in-ternational lenders and holders of sterling —including the wage restraints, some reductions in public spending and higher interest rates. But these measures have not increased the ordinary citizen's sense of well-being, end the incumbent Government suffers the consequences.

The three areas io which the tories registered gains had been regarded as Labor strongholds.
In Newcastle-Upon-Tyne, Labor held its seat. The Liberal Party won second place -an unexpected and largely unexplained occurrence for a party that has few members of Parliament — and the Conserva-tives were third. The turnout was smaller than it was in 1974, 41 percent of eligible voters against 58.4 percent two years

In the third area, Walsall, an industrial area in the Midlands, a 34-year-old company director, Robbin Hodgson, defeated the Labor candidate, David Winnick, by more than 4.000 votes. In 1974, the for mer Labor member, John Stopehouse, who "vanished" from Britain and was later tried and jailed on a variety of charges, defeated Mr. Hodgson by 16,000 votes. Most analysts felt that Mr. Stone-house's bizarre behavior — before going to jail he renounced the Labor Party and declared himself an "English nationalist" made some contribution to the extra-ordinary Tory triumph. But they also felt that the outcome refelcted widespread voter disenchantment with stiff taxation. rising prices and unemployment

The turnouts in Walsall and Workington were much higher than they were in Newcastle, in part because politicians of both parties had concentrated their efforts there. The Labor candidate in Walsall was also thought to have been hurt by the streng showing of the candidate for the National Front Party, an anti-immigration and antiblack party that captured 2,700 votes.

Whether the momentum generated by tonight's Conservative victories can be translated into parliamentary results remains to he seen. British Suggest Transition Date for Rhodesia but Nationalists Oppose I

By BERNARD WEINRAUB

GENEVA. Nov 4-Britain proposed today that Rhodesia become legally independent on March 1, 1978, but nationalists demanded an earlier date.

The offer was made by Ivor Richard, Britain's representative at the United Nations and chairman of the Geneva conference on the future of the territory. The proposal—an attempt to gain some momentum at the week-long conference—evoked a bluntly negative response from the four nationalist leaders here.

"It's got to be 12 months or we go," said Robert Mugabe, a militant nationalist with close links to the guerrillas who have been fighting Rhodesian Government forces. Prospects in Peril

If the delgates fail to agree on a date, the prospects for success at the meeting are slim. The conference was arranged by the British after Mr. Smith accepted a plan, drawn up by Secretary of State Henry A. The current conference was designed to set up the temporary government, but has bogged down over the independence date, which was not initially viewed as especially sig-

The East German Government has mied West German press reports that 10,000 people want to leave, but oot at some lesser number want to go.

About 50 to 60 persons a day go to e West German mission on the Frie-icbstrasse, mostly to apply for exit perits—twice as many visitors as a year to. And about 15,000 East Germans will given official permission this year to ttle in the West. About 5,000 others anage to cross the border illegally.

Not All Leave For Political Reasons

Not all of them leave for political rea-ns. A taxi driver said he wanted to rn more money. The average moothly age in East Germany is $400, less than of what the West Germans earn. Others ply simply because they are tired of ist Germany's travel restrictions or are rious about life in the West.

A truck driver wrote to the Interior inistry that he wanted to leave; quoting law that entitles people to relinquish

The Italian party leader, Enrico Berlinguer, said in the presence of Mr. Brezhnev, the Soviet leader, that "there is not and cannot be a leading party or leading state," and Santiago Carrillo of Spain said "there is no doubt that Communists have no center of leadership today and are oot bound by any international discipline." The speeches were printed in the East German press.

Asked about their reaction to the Berlinguer speech, a group of university stu-dents in Dresdeo who had been selected to meet with a Western reporter reacted

"We're not afraid of such remarks," one of them sald, "What was important for us was what Comrade Brezhnev said," that despite differences of opinioo the Communist parties of Europe are united and determined under the guidance of the Soviet Unioo."

Discussion Stirred Within Party

An older party member in East Berlin said: "The conference may not have provoked discussions in all walks of life, but it certainly did in the party—people are asking again about the necessity to introduce more democracy bere."

One reaction to the dissent is a strikingly liberal attitude by the authorities, which may reflect more indecision than intention.

Reiner Kunze, a 43-year-old writer, recently took a deep breath and allowed a West German publisher. Fischer of an official has been urging Erich Ho- Frankfurt, to issue a short volume ironicker, the party leader, to "take the cally called "The Wonderful Years." According to his friends, he fully expected to be arrested after the book came out, this fall.

It is a collection of vignettes from ordinary East German life, some literal, some poetic, none invented, and all bitter.

One of them, a dialogue between a teacher and a girl student, ends thus: "Teacher: I want students in my class to wear optimistic colors. Besides, your long hair is a mess.

Girl: I comb it several times a day. "Teacher: But the part isn't straight. "Locale of dialogue: High school in G.

The Lively Lebanese Are Making A Great Impact in Somber Cyprus

By STEVEN V. ROBERTS

LIMASSOL, Cyprus, Nov. 1—A recent issue of The Cyprus Mail was full of notices, some in Arabic, about ships salling betweeo Cyprus and Lebanon.
Other advertisements promoted restaurants, office buildings and hairdressers catering to Lebanese.

Oo the front page, The Mail reported that a Lebanese had been arrested with a suitcase full of hashish and the police were investigating a drug-smuggling ring.

Thousands of Lebanese poured into Cyprus in recent months as the war in their country got worse and worse. The flow has stackened now in the wake of Arab peacemaking efforts, but as The Mail indicates, the Lebanese are making a sizable and somewhat contradictory impact on this island of 650,000

Rents and Prices Skyrocket

Many Lebanese here are wealthy, with hard currency to spend, and they have given an enormous boost to hotels, restaurants and real-estate brokers. The ports of Limassot and Larnaca are jammed with ships carrying freight and passengers to both sides of war-divided Lebanon.

At the same time, rents and prices have skyrocketed. The average Lebanese teods to be a more free-wheeling character than the rather sober-sided Cypriot, and the cultural clash between them has produced several shouting

In one recent incident, the poot attendant at the Apollonia Beach Hotel here admooished a young Lebanese to obey the rules. According to a witness, the Lebanese turned on the man and threatened to kill him. The police had to be called before tempers cooled.

Paradoxically, there has been little conflict between Christian and Moslem Lebanese, and they often drink, talk, and do business tngether. Many Leba-nese of both religions insist that their country's problems are caused by out-siders, primarily Palestinians, and not each other.

Cyprus lies about 150 miles west of Beirut, and the first wave of Lebanese started arriving about a year ago. Many were Christians who could not reach the airport and were forced to travel by ship. Most left quickly for other destinations in Europe or the Middle

Cyprus Became Main Exit

When the Beirut airport closed and the road to Damascus grew treacher-ous, Cyprus became the main exit from Lebanon. People came with many motives-to do business to protect their families, to avoid conscriptioo; almost all came to the Greek-beld sector, which has better port, hotel and com-munications facilities than the Turkish

As the total swelled to about 15,000 people in September, the worried Cypriot Government limited visas for Lebanese to about 30 days. "We don't want people to immigrate here," said a Government official. "We can't find work for all of our own people."

Canada and Australia — the two countries willing to accept large-scale migration from Lebanoo—set up spe-cial offices here to handle the demand. Since May, the Canadian office in Limassol has approved 4,500 applications for immigrant status, as opposed to 1,462 for all of 1975.

Many Lebanese bave business interests throughout Europe and the Middle East, and Cyprus attracted executives in such fields as shipping, tourism and insurance. Here, they can stay in touch with Beirut by boat and other cities by an efficient telecommunications system. Every week, it seems, the airport is adding flights to places like Benghazi Libya, Jidda, Saudi Arabia, and Kuwait.

Outsiders Generally Barred

Outside businessmen are generally barred from doing business within Cyprus. The Cypriots are still recovering from the war of 1974 and do not want competition. One booming business is the ship-ment of goods into Lebanoo. They are often unloaded here and switched to small craft for the run eastward. The main cargoes are food, fuel and such raw materials as cloth- And rumors persist that Cyprus is also a transit point for weapons.

The Cypriots are rather surprised by the Lebauese. "They're spending money and carrying on business as if nothing had happened," said one journalist. "You bardly see them in a sad mood.
Wherever they go, they're first out oo
the dance floor."

But sioce the earlier windfall of cash, comptaints have started to spread. The monthly rent for an average house here has jumped from $125 to $500, and landlords are using tricks to evict Cypriot teoaots, Lebanese buyers pay double prices for fresh fruits and vegetables, said one restaurant man-

One of the deepest fears is the drug problem. "We didn't know this before," a Cypriot sald grimly. 'The Lebanese

Japan Readies for General Election

TOKYO, Friday, Nov. 5—An extraordioay session of Japan's Parliament, which began amid bitter party wrangling almost two months ago, ended quietly late last night and the scene was set for natioowide general elections on Dec. 5.

Hours later, Deputy Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda, who also heads the power-ful Ecocomic Planning Agency, resigned from the Cabinet of Prime Minister Takeo Miki. The news, which is expected to have no policy effect, gives the 71-year-old Mr. Fukuda the political freedom to freely challenge Mr. Miki for leadership of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party. The confrootation will likely come at party convention after the elections.

With voluminous oews coverage of the American elections fresh in their minds, along with knowledge of the electoral fate of many incumbent United States legislators, Japan's lawmakers began returning to their own home districts for the first campaign in foor years.

At stake will be the 511 seats of the expanded lower House of Representa-tives, the more powerful of Japan's two legislative bodies. Elections for the House of Councillors are set for oext summer The current session of Parliament, the first in postwar Japanese history to last the full four-year term without dissolu-tion by the Prime Minister, formally ex-pires Dec. 9. Its members, however, will not convene again before then.

Officials are preparing for nationwide balloting on Dec. 5, although the date cit for the currer is not official until routinely proclaimed seven months old.

Party has held a legistative majority ever since the Liberal and Democratic parties merged in 1955. But the ranks of Liberal Democratic legislators have been eroded in recent years, primarily because Japan's oormally conservative rural population has dwin-

Still, the party was able to muster enough votes to pass three pieces of im-portant fiscal legislation, the reason the 69-year-old Mr. Miki summoned Parlia ment into special session Sept. 16.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4-Four large Government agencies are preparing to issue more lenient standards for judging employers' compliance with antidiscriminatioo laws.

The agencies include the Departments of Justice, Treasury and Labor, as well as the United States Civil Service Com-mission, sources here said.

"The oew guidelines are likely to be published some time next week," said Lawrence Lorber, director of tha Office of Federal Contracts Compliance, hranch of the Labor Department.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, along with womeo's and civil rights groups, object strenuously to the proposed standards, which, they say, will allow private employers to do less about hiring and promoting minorities and women.

Mr. Hawkins, who sent his statement to Deputy Attoroay General Harold Tyler, Fraser, the chief U.A.W. negotiator, told

Beginning in mid-September, the union abut down Ford Motor Company opera-tions in the United States for 28 days. There have not been two national auto workers' strikes in one year at least since the early labor struggles of the 1930's. Under the auto workers' customary bargaining strategy, Ford was picked as the "target" company in this year's ne-gotiations in the United States. The theory is that singling out one company as a strike target puts extra pressure on that company to reach a settlement. Then the new contract can be used as a pattern for agreements with the other companies, both in the United States and in Canada.

Ford Contract Provided Model Usually, the theory has worked, and in most key respects it appeared today to be working this year as well. Mr. Fraser said today that Chrysler had agreed to accept the general Ford pattern for bluequate for Chrysler. Chrysler workers were hit much more severely by layoffs than were Ford workers during the 1974-75 recession, and the fund ran dry at Chrysler. It did not do so at Ford. Consequently, the union has demanded about $4 million in additional money from Chrysler in additional money from Chrysler, in addition to gains made in the Ford settlement.

This has been a major issue in the Chrysler talks, but Mr. Fraser said today that it had been settled. He would not say what the settlement involved.

Farming Out of Work One of the issues still unsettled in-volved the farming out of work to sub-contractors while Chrysler workers are laid off. Another involved the reassignment of supervisory personnel to assem-hly-line johs in hard times, and the laying off of line workers. The union contends that about 2,000 line workers were so idled during the 1974-75 slump.

The Chrysler talks differ from the Ford

Transcript of News Conference Held by President-Elect Carter in Plains, Gec

Following is a transcript of the news conference held in Plains, Ga., last night by President-elect Jimmy Carter, as recorded by The New York Times through the facilities of ABC News:

OPENING STATEMENT

This will be the first of many press conferences that I nope to bold during the next four years. I hope that I can have at least two full-scale press conferences a month while I am President. During this transition period they might be less frequent than that but we anticipate another one in about two

The first thing I want to do is express my deep thanks to all the people of this country who have expressed their confidence in me. We've campaigned now for almost two years—my family and myself—and we've been graciously received, and I'm very grateful for the honor that's been bestowed on me.

I might say that no matter how anyone may have voted on Tuesday, for me or for President Ford or others, I deeply need the support of all American people as we approach the time for a new Administration next January.

I also want to express my special thanks again to President Ford and to Vice President Rockefeller and others who work with them in the present Administratioo for their gracious offer of belp that has come to us from many sources io the last day, and we will take full advantage of the opportunity to have a small and barmomous transition period.

And I want to thank Seoator Mondale for doing such a superb joh throughout the country after he was chosen as Vice-Presidential nominee. He and I have become close personal friends. and I expect him to play a larger role in the next Administration than any other previous Vice President bas ever played. I think this will be demonstrated to the press and the public during the coming weeks as we prepare for the transition from one administration to another.

We hope to bave an immediate and very close initiation of proper relation-ships between myself and Senator Mondale on the one hand and the members of Congress on the other, and as we prepare for major problems coocerning the putting of American people hack to work, increasing job opportunities and control of inflation, our energy policy, defense matters, tax reform welfare reform, and other matters that have been discussed in this campaign, we'll work intimately with Congress on a bipartisan basis to achieve these

I might point out that we have initi-ated today and will he continuing in the next few weeks a very thorough preparation for the transition period. This will involve a preparation of a budget for the transition, an establishment of an office in Washingtoo which I will visit on occasion and also the preparation for appointments of major importance in the next Administration from Cabinet officials 00 down.

Mondale a 'Full Partner' Senator Mondale will work as a full partner with me io all these matters that relate to the transition preparing for the next Administration. The last thing I'd like to say before

I answer questions is that I know the American people realize that we can't do everything. It's going to require a great deal of cooperation between my-self as a President-elect, of us who will serve in the Administration and the American people and the Congress.

We'll set priorities, we'll work hard to accomplish all of our goals, but there has to be a realization it's a shared responsibility among the people of this country. And now I'd be glad to answer any questions, beginning with Mr. Questions

1. Adequate Mandate

Q: Mr. Carter, you bave proposed great number of rather severe changes in the American Government -reorganization of the hureaucracy, tax reform, a national health program welfare reform, urban assistance and so forth. Sir, giveo the margin of your victory do you think that you have a sufficient mandate from the people to get these programs! through the Con-

A: Well, I helieve yes. Although I would have preferred a unanimous vote on Tuesday, I think that the mandate was broad-based and I think certainly adequate. There were times Tuesday night when a one-vote margin would have been very welcome. But we'll achieve. I think, about 300 electoral votes, which is about the same as was achieved in 1948, 1960, 1968-other close elections.

Wa had a clear majority of the total electorate in this country which has been oot often, not always, the case. I think 13 Presidents have been elected with less than 50 perceot of their votes. And I believe that there has been such a clear discussion of issues in the cam-paign, particularly including the three 90-minute debates, and the fact that the Congress and I will both represent the same party, that the reorganization of the structure of Government, the hasic tax reform, welfare reform, the evolution of an energy policy and other matters of this kind will be not only possible hut I think it's predicted will he achieved. I don't underestimate a difficulty. I think the thoroughness with which we prepare for the transitioo from one Administration and the close relationship that we can build with Googress, and the openoess of our expression of hope, our detailed plans as they do evolve to the American people—these thiogs will make these achievements possible. But there are three entities that have to be involved: the American people, the Congress and the Executive Admioistration. And I believe that all three of those are eager now to sea those accomplishments realized,

2. Significance of Vote

Q: I'd like to probe a bit further your talk about the election. What is your opinion why you won-was it a negative vote against the Administration for high unemployment and high inflation, or did your talk about trust and compassion tap some yearnings in the laod. What is your opinion?

A: That's hard to assess without see ing a breakdown of the voters' attitudes as they left the polls and in the post election analyses. I don't believe that it was a strong negative reaction to President Ford or his Administration. All the opinion polls that I have seen and my own assessment of the people's attitudes is that Mr. Ford enjoyed a positive reaction of image. think many felt that he had served only part of a term that be did an excellent job in correcting the problems that had been extant in the White House with Watergate, and many people felt he deserved a time to show on his own that he could accomplish more io his own Administratioo, that was a thiog that worked in his favor. We ran a very wide-based campaign.

We have, I think-had-an adequate chance to discuss the issues. I think in the trust among people towards my-self and President Ford there was no substantial difference. I think that many people felt it was a time to change in Washington, to have a more aggressive leadership demonstrated, I think there was a deep concern among the American people—and there still is—about the very high unemployment rate, ioflation rate, and the unprecedented budget deficits. I think one of the thiogs that worked to my advaotage was my commitment to a husinesslike, tough, competent Administra-tion, of the executive branch itself.

And perhaps one other factor—thesa are all just personal opinions—was a desire on the part of the American people to see some barmooy returned to Washington with cooperation between the President and the Congress, provid-ed the President still exercises strong leadership when there's a disagreement hetween the White House and the Congress. But it's hard for me to assess it except as a very deeply involved per-soo. I think the objective analyses from the public opinion polls would probably be more accurate perhaps than my own

3. Tax Cut and Economy

Q: One of your top economic advisers, Mr. Klein, has talked of the possi-bility of a need for a $10 to 15 billion additional tax cut if the economy continues to stagnate. What factors will you take into consideration that might cause you to make such a recommendation and whether the chances of such a recommendation will be required when you take office in January?

A. Several of those who have advised me on economic matters bave said that if the economy is still as stagnant next January as it is now, that a tax reduction primarily oriented toward the payroll tax level might be necessary to stimulate the economy. The size of the reduction will still have to be determined as would the need

I think, though, this would be a very strong possibility if there is no recovery and the rate of growth of our economic product, which has been fairly low recently, and if the economic inoicators for this oext quarter should show a negative aspect as they have for the last two mooths.

So, that is a possibility. It's one that we will assess continually. If any tax reduction comes it would be to stimufate purchasing power among the average American family and would be heavily oriented toward the lower pay-

4. Payroll Tax

Q: When you say payroll tax, do you mean the deduction from individual income oo a weekly basis, or do you mean something toat relates to Social Security payroll deduction?

A: I think the major thing that I could say without being too specific, which I'm not qualified to do yet, is that it would come in order to stimulate purchasing power of consumer goods among those that might receive the tax benefits.

5. Foreign Policy Priorities

Q: The Soviet Union and Egypt have ed an urgent call for a reconvening of the Geneva Conference on the Mid-dle East. Britain is in financial chaos and the SALT Treaty between the Unit-ed States and the Soviet Unioo is in limbo. I wonder if you would give us some idea of what your foreign policy priorities are now?

A: Well I've expressed it many times during the campaign. One would be to restore good relationships with our own allies and friends, which I think to some degree have been neglected in recent years. Secondly, to open up the policy-making decision process to the Congress and to the American people and then to deal with these problems in an open fashion so the American people would understand them.

Within the next few weeks, as one of the earliest responsibilities in this transition period, we will schedule a two-day session with foreign-policy leaders, perhaps including the present Administration, if that can be worked out-certainly among those who will serve in the next Administration, myself, Senator Mondale and Congressional leaders. And I think I would be better able to answer specific questions following that session. But I am very hopeful that in the next Administration we can help to alleviate problems in the Middle East and hope to have a general agreement there. But I can't answer your question specifically.

Q: Would you like to at any point now reassure our allies or any-per-haps the Soviet Union-on the continuity of your foreign policy at this

A. Yes. That should be clear to them. There will be, obviously, continuity. I bope that we can cootinue our procedures already initiated. Fairly, quite soon, within the next two or three weeks, hopefully I might meet with President Ford and his key Cabinet members that he chooses to hring into the session so that I can receive a briefing on what our present policies are and at that time would be an appropriate time for me to express a major commitment to continuity.

But I can assure those cootinual allies and friends and particularly those neighbors in this bemisphere and those who are potential adversaries with whom we have friendly relationships now—the Soviet Uniton, the People's Republic of China and all—that we will be constantly searching for peace.

We will constantly search for a stable and predictable relationships with all oations and that there will be a substantial amount of cootinuity as a transition takes place from one Administration to the next.

6. Cabinet Appointments Q: Could you tell us something about how you will go about making Cahinet appointments. Do you have a priority about the posts you would like to fill and do you have a deadline by which you intend to have all this?

A. I'd he glad to. The procedure that I shall use for choosing Cabinet mem-bers and other officials at the Cabinet level will be patterned after the que that I used in choosing the Vice-Presidential nominee after I received the nomination of the party.

We will seek in every instance for approximately 7ā top positions recom-mendations from knowledgeable people around this country and assess those recommendations, interview those who might be qualified and try to achieve some geographical and other balance in the total Cahinet and the public servants there. I would guess that this would be a very careful, very slow, very methodical process. I don't anticioate any Cabinet positions being filled any time soon. I would guess not until some time in December. As I approach the time for making a final decision in each instance I in-tend to consult closely with Senator Mondale before a choice is made. And among several who might be considered for a particular post, say, Secretary of Agriculture, Defense or State. I would like to work with those severat people as intimately as possible in assessing transitioo decisions so that I might get to know them better if I don't know them at all now.

I would hope that by the time I make my final selections that I would have had a chance to work with the potential appointees, and for those who are familiar with the procedures that I out-lined following the choice of Senator Mondale as a runoing mate, that would be the pattern that we would follow.

7. Priorities in Cabinet

Q: Are there any positions you hope to fill first, second or third, or are you looking at any sort of priority? Secretary of State first, or Secretary of the Treasury?

A. Not now. I would like to bring into an advisory group as part of the transition process those who might very well serve in those two key positions that you've named Secretary of Defense and Secretary of State-but as far as my announcing who will be the Secretaries of those two departments, I would like to reserve the right to do toat no earlier than December.

8. Policy on Yugoslavia

O: In the heat of the campaign things are sometimes said hastily, and as you often stressed, you answered questions based on the knowledge that you had at the moment. On the subject of Yugoslavia is it conceivable that once you've studied that question further, you might reserve your option as President concerning action by the Soviet Union there? A: That's a possibility, I have made my position on Yugosiavia clear: that if the Soviet Union should invade Yugoslavia, that this would be an extremely, serious breach of peace. It would be a threat to the entire worlo, as far as a peaceful world is concerned. It would make it almost impossible for us to continue under the broad generic sense of détente. And whether or not we actually committed troops to Yugoslavia, with the-the coolecture of my opinion is that that would be unlikely -hut I would have to make a decision on a final basis at that point I might add that my information from Yugoslavia has been that the nation is strong militarily, very highly united, very deeply committed to independence and that the chance for a Soviet invasion would be extremely unlikely. Yes sir.

9: Narrowness of Victory

Q: Governor, most of the American people have the perception that your election in fact was very narrow, that a few thousand votes in a few key states would have made you not the winner hut the loser. I wonder if you think there's some message here that the American people were trying to send to you? And secondly, if you think there is one, how does that enter into your planning for the new Administra-

A: Since the election wa sover, I've looked back at some previous election results and I think this outcome is fairly typical. I think that in 1948, 1960, 1968, for instance, in all these instances, the victor got less than 50 percent of the votes and approximately 300 electoral college votes. I think my total will be a fairly clear majority and roughly 300 electoral votes—I don't think Oregon has yet been decided, as least I don't know about it.

I think that there was a good broad base for support expressed for me. I noticed very early in the evening I had about a 3 percentage point advantage over President Ford and that clear margin was cootinued throughout the en-tire election.

Not Reticent About Moving Aggressively

I don't feel timid or cautious or reticent about moving aggressively to carry out my campaign commitments because I only got about 300 electoral college votes. I'll be very aggressive in keeping my promises to the American people. And I believe the fact that the Congress is likely to be willing to cooperate—at least for the early stages of my campaign-will much more than compensate for the closeness of tha election. The one other point I'd like to make here—I think there were seven states that I lost where I got et least 49 percent of the votes, so that just a few thousand votes would have given me a very large electoral college ma-

But I think that the fact that I won and bad such a broad base of support throughout the country and a clear ma-jority is a good indication of support.

10. Breadth of His Campaign .

Q: One criticism of the way you rao your campaign was that after promising at the Democratic Convention that you would seek hroad input into the campaign of many elements io the Democratic Party, Is the fact that you resorted again to a very tight group of advisers whom you've known for a long time. Now, do you feel that the criticism is valid, and if you do. do you intend to do anything about it in running the country?

A: No. I don't feel that the criticism valid. I would guess that a substanmajority of people here who are state coordinators were not involved in a primary campaign. And among those who were leaders in our issue-analysis sectioo, which was an integral part of the campaign. very few of these had ever been associated in our campaign hefore. Those who have belped in the transition preparation, which is now just going to be evident to the American people, were substantially recruited from outside our original campaign structure.

But I think we have a very broad base of not only electoral support in the votes cast but also among those who have worked with us in the campaign in the 50 states—the issue analysis, which was the second part of it and the third part was preparation for this next Administration.

11. Bid for Western Support

Q. Without seeming to minimize the strength of your victory or the breadth of your support, there did seem to be a kind of an uneveo geographical distribution, particularly in the West. The Great Plains, the Rocky Mountains, and the West Coast with one or two excep-tions remained loyal to President Ford. As someone who said at the outset that you wanted a very broad hase to carry out your reforms. I wonder if you see this as a problem, and more to the point, if there's anything you feel you can or should do to try and win the support from this Western part of the country?

A: I think you probably noticed that many of the Western states that I did not win but were fairly close
-Washington, Oregon, California and others and I wish I could have carried all 50 states. But since I didn't I hope to demonstrate evco before the inauguration my complete commitment to being the President of all the Americao

I believe it's accurate, too, to say that the furthest Western state was one that I did carry. That was Hawaii. So I think we had a fairly good broad base of support. If you would compare them out of my own electoral victory with, say, 1960 when President Kennedy was elected, you would see a very

But I wish that I had carried the whole country. 12. Oil Price Increases

Q. The OPEC oil nations are meeting in December to consider an oil price increase, possibly 15 percent or more. Is there anything you can do not being President to infloence that, and if so, wbat is it? A: I don't know of anything I can do. One of the things I want to be very careful abou, icluding this press conference, is not to not as though I'm already President. I have no responsibility in the Government at all. And I want to be sure that the American people understand that President Ford is in office; he has the formation, or to cooperation with exist-ing Cabinet members, will be at the discretion of President Ford. Through my own public statements. I could certainly express concern about an increase in oil prices, which would be a very serious blow, I think, to the oil-consuming nations, but as far as any official capacity, any inclination on my part to be a diplomat, or to deal diplomatically with the heads of other nations, I will avoid that very

It is a serious problem, and I've just expressed, I am concerned about it. I would hope that all the OPEC nations would be reticent about increasing the price of oil, but I really don't want to mislead the American people into thinking that I can do some political or diplomatic persuasion to influence the outcome of their decision. Yes, sir?

13. White House Staff .

Q: How are you planning to appoint your White House staff, what role do you expect them to play in the overall scheme of things, and how accessible would you want your staff to be to the Congress and to tha press?

A: I haven't gone into the exact procedures that I shall use in appointing the White House staff, the Council of Economic Advisers, the National Security Council, for instance, and the Office of Management and Budget, or all the departments or quasi-departments related directly to the President, and there are obviously others.

Fil try to choose them strictly on the basis of merit. I'll use the same procedures that I used to chose the Vice President—getting 2 lot of advice from people who are knowledgeable about qualifications of those whom I do not know. I would never permit my White House staff to try to run the major departments of Government.

I would choose, for instance, Secre-of Defense, HEW, HUI who are completely con their own departments not try to run those der the White House. The staff would be serving in ty only-not in an adn pacity. And that's the believe that I can give Dixon?

Deadlock on Amendments

Prolonged debate and maneuvering in the last session failed to produce agrea-ment on "mid-course" amendments to the Clean Air Act of 1970 and the Water Pollution Control Act of 1972.

Also left hanging were amendments to the Outer Continental Shelf Act of 1953, which prescribes the terms for Federal offshore oil leases. The Pesticide Control Act of 1972 will expire in March, and its extension in some form is on the agenda. Measures to regulate surface mining and provide for the restoration of stripmined land are expected to be introduced

Carter's Church Is in a Turmoil Over Rule on Blacks

By WAYNE KING tal to The New York Time

PLAINS, Ga., Nov. 4-While Presidentend began to pull together the reins of state, the quiet country church from which he has said he draws spiritual sustenance was being torn apart hy racial tensions and leadership questions.

At an emotional meeting that sent one parishioner from the Plains Baptist Church and left another crumpled and crying in the sanctuary, the church's young minister, the Rev. Bruce Edwards, not yield to their demand that he resign because he opposed the church policy against admission of hlacks, a policy he called "immoral and sinful."

The four active deacons who were present listened quietly for the most part but made it clear that they also would not yield. Through it all the opponents called each other "Brother."

The result of the deadlock is that the church membership will he called upon to vote on whether to dismiss Mr. Edwards. The vote will be taken "Sunday week," as the pastor put it-a week from Sunday.

Mr. Edwards said that he would leave the church regardless of the outcome of the vote, but that he would not resign now, under pressure.

"There's a problem in this church," he said, "and its back must be broken. But I don't think it's good for ma to stay. The animosities are huilding. If I stay, others will leave the church and the word "niggers" was routine.

The incident, widely interpreted as poelect Jimmy Carter savored his victory litically motivated-Mr. King is a Republican who served time io prison for child nonsupport and has a history of mental effect on Mr. Carter's campaign.

Nonetheless, it brought the question of the church policy into national focus and the church itself into crisis.

So long as the racial barrier remains in effect, it is expected to he ao embar-rassment to Mr. Carter, who is a church deacon, now classified as inactive. He told the board of deacons that he would spoke against the resolution when it was adopted but has said he will not resign his membership in the church, although some black leaders have suggested that. At yesterday's evening meeting, normally devoted to prayer and Bihle study, Mr. Edwards conducted a sbort devotional, then read to the two dozen parishiooers and half-dozen reporters a letter from the deacons requesting his resignation.

An Edge in His Voice

Mr. Edwards turned to the cluster of deacons and, with an edge in his voice. said, "I do not intend to submit my resignation as pastor."

In trying to emphasize the positive in the campaign, President Ford devoted much speaking time in explaining what his Administration had done and would do to improve the "quality of life" for all Americans.

At another point in the interview, when asked if he should have taken a softer approach on the stump, Senator Dole smiled and said:

"This quality of life of the President, we tried that four or five times, and it seemed to me they (audiences) went to sleep. The people who come to rallies, they want to know you're alive. You've got to get them to go out and work for this guy."

Still later he added somewhat ruefully: "If you take the heat for the President, you have to take the tumps, too, I guess."

Asked what could have been done differently to change the results of the extremely close election. Senator Dole, a former chairman of the Republican Na-tional Committee who has made no bones about the fact that his main passion is

"Perhaps we worked too hard," he went on, in the 10½-week campaign that took him 65,000-miles through 44 states with scarcely a day off.

'And You Make Mistakes'

"You're more effective if you're rested," he explained. "My voice was giving me fits the last few weeks, and you make mistakes, too."

The Senator was wounded twice and decorated twice in World War II. His 39-month struggle for rehabilitation from wounds that left him with only one kidney and with little use of his right arm, seems, according to some friends, to have made him strongly reluctant to show any signs of weakness.

In the campaign, he often seemed uowilling to acknowledge mistakes or apologize for them, but after conceding today that he had made some because of fatigue, he went on:

Chicago's Daley Was a Big Loser in Election

By JOHN KIFNER Special to The New York Times

CHICAGO, Nov. 4-State police cars, lozens of them, were double-parked in long lines on the streets around Chicago's Civic Center Plaza on Election Day, their brown-uniformed occupants waiting to be hispatched to stop vote fraud.

The lineup of police cars-part of a widescale effort to protect voting records by Federal and local prosecuting attor-neys, both Republicans—symbolized the changes here in recent years that bave been eroding the power of Mayor Richard J. Daley's once-invincible Democratic poitical organization.

This year's election, the investigators said, was the most honest and quietest ever held here.

Its big loser was Mayor Daley. For the Democratic organization here, he most important election here bas raditionally been for the post of Cook County State's Attorney, the official who has the power to determine what or who will or will not be investigated or prosecuted. It is the crucial vote the precinct captains press for in hard times.

Republican Makes History

This year, for the first time to history, a Republican won re-election to the prosecutor's job. In addition, nearly all of the state Democratic ticket went down defeat, including the Mayor's handpicked gubernatorial candidate, and the Chicago votes were not enough to put Illinois in President-elect Jimmy Carter's

On election eve, the tightness of the Carter-Ford race recalled, particularly to worried Carter workers, the election of 1960, when Mayor Daley beld back his votes, outwaiting the returns from the Republican stronghold downstate, and hen released his votes and carried the tate by 8,858. The votes won Illimois and the Presidency for John F. Kennedy. Crying theft then, the Republicans ob-ained the records of the 50tb Precinct of the Second Ward. Although only 22 people had been registered to vote, 77 pariots were cast, 74 of them for Mr. Kennedy. A Federal judge ordered the ecords impounded in a City Hall vault, from which they promptly disappeared. Election officials, loyal Democrats, did not investigate the disappearance, and Chicago judges dismissed the Republicao units, including ooe by a defeated candidate named Benjamin Adamowski, who had been harrying the Democrats as State's Attorney.

Daley's Grip Has Weakened But the days when Mr. Daley, from his dual posts as Mayor and chairman of the Cook County Democratic Organization, exercised total control bere, and ran the law enforcement processes through loyalists in prosecutors offices and through close frieods and former law partners in key judgeships, seem, for the moment anyway, gone. Things began to change sharpty in 1972, when James R. Thompson, then the Republican-appointed United States Attorney, obtained the indictment of some 50 election workers during the primary and blanketed the city's West Side wards with Federal prosecutors in the general election.

That November, a Republican, Bernard Carey, woo the State's Attorney's office, as blacks, angered over the 1969 police raid in which Fred Hampton, the Chicago Black Panther leader, and Mark Clark, also a Panther leader, were killed, defected from the Daley camp.

Yesterday, for the first time in memory. Mr. Daley did oot appear to City Hall on the day after an election. Associates said he had gone to Florida, to fish.

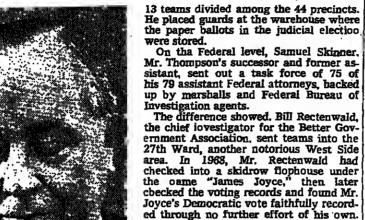

The 74-year-old Mayor and his organization are still a formidable force in the city itself. Indeed, he will probably stay in office as long as he wants to.

Reagan Hints at Active Role in Shaping G.O.P. I

By JON NORDHEIMER Special to The New York Times

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 4-Ronald Reagan has sent out signals that he plans to be active in the rebuilding of the Republican Party as it ettempts to recover from the loss of the White House to Jimmy Carter and the Democrats.

The former Governor of California, who had lost in his bid to take the party's nomination away from Gerald Ford, is now said to be privately convinced that he can again play a central role in shap-ing the party's future.

After an analysis of Tuesday's voting patterns, he was reported yesterday to have found vindication for his earlier assertion that a new conservative majority exists outside the party's traditional Eastern base. Mr. Carter's sweep of the South, he mr. Carter's sweep of the Botal, he told one close aide, was possible only because "blood was thicker than philosophy" in the region, meaning that many Southerners felt impelled to vote for the former Georgia Governor instead of fol-

Sound is as important as specifications.

"The performance of the C-1000 is virtually impeccable ...the C-1000 will pamper you as few preamps can." HIGH FIDELITY

The audiophile publications that test equipment invariably found that with Lux "every important measured specification turns out to be better than claimed..."

Why has Lux chosen such a conservative approach in the midst of the current specification race? Because Lux believes specifications and testing procedures to be less important than your satisfaction with the end result—the most accurate and "musical" sound reproduction you can hear.

It's this obsession with sound quality and listener satisfaction that has earned Lux, virtually overnight, its place in the highest echelon of hi-fi equipment manufacturers. But Lux is no newcomer to hi-fi, having played a leading role in Japan audio for more than five decades.

Recognizing a rapidly growing number of U.S. audiophiles searching for the kind of superb sound qualities delivered by Lux, their audio products can now be seen and heard only at select audio stores like Harvey Sound, whose personnel are as dedicated to the quest for perfect sound reproduction as is Lux.

NY CIANTS AT DALLAS

By WILLIAM N. WALLACE
Away games must be televised back to the home cities. That is the law of the land and, therefore, the Giants-Cowboys contest at Dallas will be seen here on Sunday over Channel 2 starting at 2 P.M. Channel 4 will show Baltimore at San Diego at 4 P.M. and that's all for Sunday Oo Mooday night two of the powers will clash, Los Angeles at Cin-cinnati, Channel 7, 9 P.M. Foothall Here is a preview of all games with woo-lost-tied records in parentheses.

Giants (0-8-0) at Dallas (7-1-0)—
From his film studies Tom Landry considers the Giants to be "the best 0-8 team I ever saw." This former Giant has always been kind. How does he explain New York's 10 straight quarticles to the control of Company have 14 ters without scoring? Cowboys have 14 regulars on injury list but all are expected to play. Betting choice: Dallas by 15 points.

Miami (4-4-0) at Jets (2-6-0)-Larry Little has plugged the bole on the Dolphin offensive line by moving out to tackle with Ed Newman at guard. On defense, Bob Matheson is back at linebacker and things are definitely looking up. As for Jets, a year ago their running backs were John Riggins and Carl Garrett and now Clark Gaines and Bob Gresham. It's not the same. Betting choice: Miami by 11.

AMERICAN CONFERENCE Baltimore (7-I-0) at San Diego (4-4-0)—Colts, whose only loss was by points to Dallas, can afford a letdown. Their secondary, weakest part of the team, will bave to watch Charlie Joiner, the Charger receiver averaging a fat 23 yards per reception. That's extraordinary. Betting choice: Colts are big favorites but there is no specific Buffalo (2-6-0) at New England (5-3-0)—Patriots bave averaged 50,000 at home in winning three of four, which is fabulous for them. Although the Bills are much weaker, O. J. Simpson is rolling again. He usually murders the Pats. Betting choice: New England by 11.

Cleveland (4-4-0) at Houston (4-4-0) -Mike Phipps, out almost all season. with an injury, will be the Browns' quarterback. Greg Pruitt is having a big year. Oilers may be full of doubt after horrible game against Baltimore. Betting choice: No line.

Pittsburgh (4-4-0) at Kansas City (3-5-0)—Franco Harris and Terry Bradshaw will start for Steelers, which adds zip to the offense. The defense, led by Jack Ham and Jack Lambert, has registered two shutouts in a row. Chiefs lead the conference in passing yardage and trail in defense. Betting choice: Pittsburgh by 12.

Opponents of Giants and Jets Are Favored on Su-Tampa Bay (0-8-0) at Deover (4-4-0)

—Jim Turner, the old Jet, enjoying banner campaign having kicked 11 field goals in 13 tries for Broncos. Buccaneers scored three touchdowns last week. They bad had just six in seven prior games. Betting choice: Denver by 17.

Kicking Failures Puzzle Giants and Danelo

By MICHAEL KATZ

Special to The New York Times PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y., Nov. 4-The thing about place-kicking, Joe Danelo said, is "you kick in games the way you've been practicing."

Joe Danelo kicked a 57-yard field-goal in practice today. Maybe the Giants will score this week against the Cowboys in Dallas. Danelo has contributed to the Giants' streak of 10 quarters of football without a point. The 5-foot-9-inch, 166pound kicker, acquired two months ago from the Green Bay Packers, has made only two of eight field-goal attempts this season. Sioce making a 22-yarder in the third game, against the Los An-geles Rams, be has missed five in a

"He's a good kicker," said Coach John McVay. "He's kicking off very well and he's making the extra points." True. But io the Giants' last two games, Danelo has only had to kick off once lo each and he has not had any extra points to attempt because the team basn't scored any touch-

Still Bothers Him

Danelo has some legitimate excuses for bis poor field-goal marksmanship this year. "I've never been burt be-fore," he said. "and I've never had any kicks blocked before."

Danelo pulled a groin muscle two days after joining the team and it still bothers him "a little." He has had three kicks blocked and twice oow the Giaots have punted from the opponent's 32-yard line instead of trying a 49-yard field goal.

"The rules definitely make you think a couple of times about taking a field-goal shot," said McVay, referring to the fact that the other team now takes over after misses at the line of scrimmage instead of the 20.

"A kicker's got to prove bimself just like any other athlete," said Danelo. The soccer-style kicker said that his teammates have "never" said a dis-coursgiog word to him after his misses. They've been real good about it." he said. "All they ever say is, 'Don't worry, Joe."

Other kirkers bave not been so lucky.
But Danelo is popular with his teammates, "a funny little guy who telismates, "a funny little guy who telismates."

great stories, especially io Italian dia-lect," according to McVay.

And like Dave Jenoings, the punter, Danelo is a "thinker" the coach said.
"That's how coaches get ulcers," McVay said, "kickers who think."

Danelo has incorporated some of his ideas into the Giants' kickoff plays. Since he was a soccer player, he can use his left foot and he has worked on a left-fooled onside kick. In an early game, the Giants recovered one of his left-footed inside kicks, but the play was called back because another player

It's such little things that have given the Giants on 0-8 wor-lost record.

A 'Spirited' Practice Practice was interrupted by a fight between Bob Tucker, the 6-3, 230-pound tight end, and Brad Cousino, the 6-0, 215-pound linebacker signed two days earlier. Cousing, using a hockey player's trick of pulling the jersey over his opponeot's bead, easily wrestled Tucker to the ground after an exchange of some right-hand punches. "Most spirited practice since training camp," McVay said. "Players were growling at each other."

·John Hicks's old high school io Cleveland, John Hay, was having hard times. Not only was the football team losing, it had oo funds for equipment. The guard arranged for the Giants to send 32 pairs of used shoes and John Hay is now winning, Hicks reports. "And don't make any ironic statements out of that," the 258-pound lineman.

Jets Pleased With Davis

'At Hempstead, L.I., the Jets were pleased with the work of Steve Davis, the running back who bas missed two games with twisted knee. Davis, who was listed as "doubtful" earlier in the week is now "questionable," but the Jets feel he'll be able to play Sunday against Miami at Shea Stadium. . . . Bob Martin, the linebacker who leads the team in tackles, did not practice because of a hip pointer, but expects to play against the Dolphins. . . .Joe Namath threw well, but Richard Todd is still the starting quarterback this week.

we face all year. The league stats tell the story. Dartmouth is lirst in delense [231 yards a game] and second in of-fense [334.8 yards a game]. Brown is third in both categories.

Both teams play rough, tough foot-ball, and Anderson said the result might depend upon the kicking game. And Dartmouth has an extraordinary performer in Nick Lowery. He has not missed a place-kick this year (2) extra points and 7 for 7 on field goals.) Dartmouth also has the league's leading receiver in Harry Wilson, who has caught 30 passes for 497 yards and three touchdowns. Brown counters Wilson with Bob Faraham, who trails Wilson by two catches this season and led the nation in receiving a year ago. Both teams have strong runners-Curt Oberg, Sam Coffey and Jim Eden. For Dartmouth and Wally Shields, Seth Morris and Billy Hill for Brown. Kevin Case, Dartmouth's lest-handed passer, and Paul Michalko of Brown are poised, experienced quarterbacks. Scott Nelson and Luke Gaffney head the Brown defense, and Kevin Young, John Mugglebee and Dave Casper lead Dart-

Brown never has defeated Dartmouth since the league was organized officially in 1956. The Bruins' last victory came io 1955 wheo Crouthamel was against the Tigers than it did last week against Coroell.

"We'll have to play a whole lot better,

a senior in high school.
Yale, tied with Brown for the league lead, will have to play much better

Carmen Cozza, Yale's coach said.

Princeton knows the Tigers cannot run through the Yale defenses. 'We'll have to pass more," he said. Princeton's running game has stuttered all season while the Elis have stormed past everyone except Brown and Coroell with a powerful ground attack featuring John Pagharo, Mike Southworth, Rick Angelone and John Hatem.

The Elis lead the league in total offense with a 372.8 figure and are fourth in defense with a yield of 253.4 yards a game. This will be the 99th game in the series. Yale leads, 5t to 37, with 10 ties. The Elis also will be seeking their 10th successive triumph over Princeton.

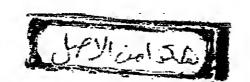

The Harvard-Penn battle will feaure

the league's top passers, Jim Kubacki and Bob Graustein. They are running J. 2 in total defense and will be shooting for career records of their schools. Harvard, 3-2 in the league, must win to stay alive in the title race. Penn, seeking a winning sason, stands 3-4 overall. The Quakers could get even by beating the Crimson, then finish 5-4 with a victory next week over Cornell. It will oot be easy. Harvard has won the last threa meetings.
Columbia and Cornell, both 1-4 in the league, will settle the battle for the cellar spot.

Bill Campbell, Columbia's coach.

said, "Cornell did a heckuya of a job against a real good Yale team. Their offense is jelling." He also ranked Eamon McEneaney of Cornell with Harvard's former outstanding receiver, Pat McInally.

22 Players Chosen in Free-Agent Draft; Expensive Bidding War Is in Prospect

With the Yankees and the Mets acting like "Me and My Shadow" and Charles O. Finley floating between tragedy and comedy, baseball's club nwners quickly sailed through their historic free-agent draft yesterday and it didn't cost them a cent-yet.

The money, though, will start flowing any minute, now that the teams have filled out their negotiation lists. Clubs and players were free to negotiate as soon as the 1-hour-45-minute, 20-round draft ended, and signings could pop up at any time.
In fact, one of the 24 free agents,

Bill Campbell, the top relief pitcher in the American League this season, was said to be on the verge of signing with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Twenty-two of the 24 available free agents were placed on negotiating lists. The Yankees named nine players and the Mets eight, and six players ap-peared on both lists.

Grich First on Yankee List

Bobby Grich, a second baseman who can also play shortstop, was the first player named by the Yankees and Gary Matthews, a solid outfielder, was the Mets' first selection.

Except for three teams, each club can sign only two players, even though there was no limit placed on the num-ber of players a team could place no its negotiation list. Oakland (8), Baltimore (4) and California (3) can sign as many players as they lost. In this first-ever draft at the Plaza Hotel, the teams were permitted to keep drafting or drop out at any time. The Cincinnati Reds drafted no one while the Chicago White Sox compiled the longest list, 18 players.

Reggie Jackson, the dynamic but costly outfielder, was the first player selected—by the Montreal Expos—but his ensuing status created perhaps the lishment viewed the draft "as, to some extent, experimental." He read that it had been "agreed upon in a spirit of compromise and mutual accommodation," meaning that the owners had it stuffed down their gullets after Andy Messer-

Bronfman said the commissioner was wrong about the date. Then he said: "With great anticipation and great pleasure, Montreal selects Reggie Jackson." As be spoke.

Buzzie Bavasi of the San Diego Padres was relaying a message that Jackson had called a news conference at the La Costa resort near San Diego for 3 P.M. Eastern time. It was of his own value, for after that opening claim, 42 oppor-

Gene Tenace, the cally catcher in the lottery, was gobbled up first, leaving the list of eligible players midway through the third round. Don Baylor, a speedy baserumer whose outfield arm is questionable, was the next to go and Joe Rudi, an outstanding out-fielder, was the third, both in the of the eight players who fled the Oakland A's as free agents. Finley, who stood by idly as his team disintegrated, was understandably disturbed by the procedure that evolved from the Andy Messersmith court decision and the re-

Messersmith court decision and the resulting labor negotiations.

"It's like baving sumeone come into your home and snatching up your children," said Finley, dressed in a blue corduroy leisure jacket instead of his usual green blazer. "We spend millions neveloping these players. We give them a bonus, We nurse them through the minors. We develop them at a great expense over a period of maybe 10 to 12 years. Then, bang, Just like that, they are taken away."

Finley, bowever, still can sign the players to whom be lost sole claim. After the 20th round of the draft, the clubs were given a chance to retain lost players. When Rullie Fingers's name was announced for Finley's nod, the owner said, "Give me 10 seconds."

Other baseball executives roared with laughter and then Finley said, The Yankees retained their right to sign Doyle Alexander, the only New York player who became a free agent, but they aren't expected to sign him.

tion of granting that guarantee to bim.

The Yankees, however, will go after Grich in a big way. They want the 27-year-old infielder to be their short-stop and they will bid high for him.

Grich, formerly a Baltimore Oriole, also will entertain bids from the Orioles. Boston, Detroit, San Diego and California, among others, and be just might be in a good position to get the $2 million he reportedly wants for five years.

The Mets also selected Grich and they and the Yankees also duplicated on Matthews, Baylor, Don Gullett, Jackson and Bert Campaneris. The Mets went

Bold Forbes to Be

Bold Forbes, winner of this year's Kentncky Derby and Belmont Stakes, will be syndicated by bis owner, E. Rodriguez Tizol. The colt will not race any more but will stand at stud, his trainer, Laz Barrera, announced yester-day. The horse will be shipped to Stone Farm in Paris, Ky., on Nov. 20, and Race he will perform stud duty Tracks at the farm owned by Arthur Boyd Hancock 3d.

Aaron U. Jones is heading the syndicate dealing with Rodriguez. There was no announcement as to the number of the rest involved on the cost of a share.

shares involved or the cost of a share. "He bas passed his soundness test administered by Drs. William Reed and James Hill," Barerra said. "He now goes to Kentucky for fertility tests."

Bold Forbes won 13 of 18 career starts and never finished worse than third. He had career earnings of $523,035. Purchased as a yearling for $15,200, be began racing in Puerto Rico. He won all five starts as a 2-year-old there before being phipped to New York, where be won the Tremont and the Saratoga Special. Besides the two jewels of the Triple Crown, his other victories as a 3-year-old included the San Jacinto, Bay Shore and Wood Memorial

The colt's most recent outing was last Saturday, when he finished second in the Vosburgh but was disqualified and placed third. He came out of that race with a cut on his right hind boof.

It had been expected that Bold Forbes would be predicated but the move was would be syndicated, but the move was not expected so soon. Barrera had said that if the horse healed well, he might ship him to California to run in the rich winter stakes races for 4-year-olds

At Laurel ...

There is an excellent chance an American horse will win tomorrow's 25th Washington, D. C. International, but for France, not the United States. Three French representatives were listed yesterday among the top four early choices for the $150,000 race over 1½ miles on the grass.

Jacques Wertheimer's Ivanjica, a 4year-old Kentucky-bred filly, was made the early favorite et 2-1. Nelson Bunker Hunt's Youth, a 3-year-old Kentucky-bred colt, was next at 5-2. Xavier Beau'd On My Way II, a 6-year-old Virginia-bred horse, was listed at 6-1 by the Laurel oddsmaker. They are running for France because in the International, a horse represents the country in which he has done most of his racing.

The third early pick, at 5-1 is Mrs. Charles W. Eogeihard's Rose Bowl, a

"These were the four guys we were interested in," explained Turner, who signd Messersmith as a free agent last spring. "We didn't want to spend all winter negotiating. Sure, we're taking a chance if we don't sign any of them, but if we don't, it wouldn't be the end of the world. Heck, Cincinnati didn't select anybody."

The Reds did pass up the draft, only retaining rights to signing Gullett, but they have won the World Series the last two years. The Braves finished last in their division last season.

Miller Is Suspicious

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association and one of the architects of the novel draft system, was generally pleased with the way the operation had gone, but one aspect displeased him

He pointed to the way four lesser players had been deorived of t chance to negotiate with all teams. If a player is selected by one team or none, he is declared a free agent who can sign with anyone. Lonnie Dade, Tim Nordhrook, Eric Soderholm and Royle Stillman went into the late rounds having been selected by only one team—in each case, Oakland. However, other teams, after having passed for as many as 10 rounds, suddenly named those players.

"If the clubs wanted those players," Miller said, "why didn't they select them earlier? Why did they pick them when they did?"

Willie McCovey and Nate Colbert, a pair of veteran first basemen, were the only players not named by any team, As a result, they are eligible to negotishot 64 today. It's the same with Jerry McGee, a $131,000 winner, and Allen Miller, 99th on the list with only $21,567.

"I've been thanking him all day for letting me play with him," Miller said after they joined in shooting a 63 that enabled them to share the lead with a pair of tour freshmen, Bill Kratzert and Woody Blackburn. Kratzert and Blackburn, who have known each other from college golf, paired quite accidentally. They were rooming together last summer during the Canadian open, and they found that neither had made a commitment for this event. So they said, "Why not play together?"

Arnold Palmer and Leonard Thompson play the event with mock kidding. When asked how they came to be paired, Thompson answered, "Anie's just lucky, I guess." Palmer retorted by saying, "Last year we walked to-gether, hut we didn't play together." That was Palmer's way of saying they missed the 36-hole cut.

Par Takes a Beating

There are 104 pairs of professionals in this $200,000 tournament, with scoring hased on the hetter hall of each team. Under these conditions, scores of eight or nine under par are common. Today 98 of the 104 teams scored 72 or under; 72 is par for both the Magnolia and Palm courses.

Parker and McNickle, in Parker's words, 'hang around and gamble and practice a lot together, and they often win money wheo they "play a couple of other guys."

"Our astrologer told us our charts were compatible, that our moons were in synonymous fixed positions," Parker. added, out meaning a word of it.
"We're so compatible that Artie wears sandals and I wear cowboy boots."

Mason Rudolph, who has paired five or six times with another old-timer, Dan Sikes, said "I wouldn't trade Dan for anybody"-this after shooting 64. "We play well together because we play similar," said Rudolph. "We both drive straight and we hit e lot of greens. In fact, it makes me nervous if a partner leaves me out on the limb.

Dan feels the same way." Partner Also Is Guest

Crenshaw and Pearce have known each other since 1968, when, the age of 16, they met in the juniors' championship of the United States Golf Association. They joined the tour together in 1973. For this tournament, Crenshaw is living in Pearce's home in nearby Crenshaw carded six of the team's least eight matches. Sol Berg, the owner of the Sets, said: "In 1974 I promised New York a championship team. It took me three years to achieve that goal hy winning the 1976 title.

"But a championship is only one form of winning, and I would be less than honest if I said I was satisfied with our growth rate at the box office. Last year, we had a 14 percent in-crease, the lowest in the league."

Berg and King cited as their goals for 1977: 1. Repeat as W.T.T. cham-plon; 2. Lead the league in attendance; 3. Establish the best front office in professional sports; 4. Become the most successful franchise in the "Big Apple."

The first goal already received a set-back when Billie Jean King, the most prominent Sets member, disclosed she was undergoing surgery Tuesday on her right knee. It would be the second operation on that knee and would keep her immobile for at least two months, sha said.

The Sets' season begins May 3 and ends Aug. 10.

The colorfully attired, red-jacketed 32-man Royal Canadian Mounted Police troop continued to sparkle yesterday in its precision drill. It is being offered twice each day to the tunes of familiar musical comedy numbers.

"Spectators at horse shows of almost 100 years ago certainly would have heen impressed beyond words if they had heen ehle to sit in oo these Canadians," said Mrs. Marie Lafrenz of Manhasset, L. L., a show ring devotee who has done considerable research on the fixture. "In the old days," continued Mrs. Lafrenz, "a regular part of the program was having horse drawn fire engines compete. The gimmick was to see how quickly borses coold be barnessed, hooked to the engine and seot on their way. This type exhibition certainly puts the focus on precision—but of the hustle, bustle type.

"And then there was the mounted police competition. Since accompbiles were still a dream and horse drawn buggies were the thing, there were plenty of runaways on city streets. So, the show would present a policeman's class that had the earmarks of a rodeo. The competitor's job, of course, was to see how fast he could stop a runaway-in the show ring."

Cavaliers Stay Unbeaten, Set Back Bucks, 96 to 88

Russell's 3-point play with four minutes remaining broke open a tense battle tonight as the Cleveland Cavaliers remained undefeated after seven National Basketball Association games by downing the Milwaukee Bucks, 96-88.

The Cavaliers scored 12 straight points at the end of the first period and ioto the second and took their biggest lead at 39-24. The Bucks, however, fought back, led by the scoring of Brian Winters and Junior Bridgeman, and trailed, 47-41, at the balf.

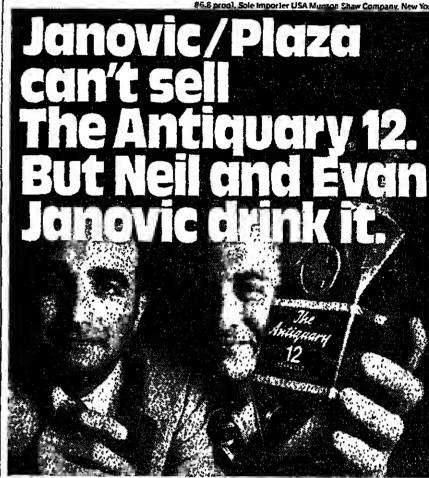

The teams went into the final period tied at 63-all, and the Bucks, who held leads of e point several times, had a 79-78 advantage with 5:45 remaining. Dick Snyder converted a pair of free throws and broke an 80-80 tie, Russell

DEAN DIXON, 61, DIES; CONDUCTOR IN EXILE

First Black to Lead Philharmonic Left the U.S. in 1949 to Build His Reputation in Europe

Special to The New York Times GENEVA, Nov. 4 - Dean Dixon, Harlem-born black conductor who left the United States in 1949 to build his reputation as a symphony conductor in Europe, died of a stroke yesterday in a Zurich hospital. He was 61 years old.

Mr. Dixon, who had lived in Ober-Aegeri, just south of Zurich, for the last two years, died just a few days after returning home from a concert engagement in Brussels. He suffered a heart attack and underwent open-heart surgery in 1975 but returned to an active concert schedule last April.

He is survived by his wife, Ritha, and two daughters of two previous marriages, Nina of Frankfurt and Diane of Topanga,

His 'Maestro' Was Hard Won By RONALD SMOTHERS

It took a 21-year self-imposed exile from the United States and a sojourn as conductor of orchestras in Sweden, Denmark, Germany, France, Italy, Spain Japan and Australia for Dean Dixon to Japan and Australia for Dean Dixon to win the title of "maestro." It was a title that had for the most part eluded him in more than 10 years of work as a cooductor in New York and despite reviews through the early 1940's terming him a "coming man" and "ranking conductor."

Throughout this time, Mr. Dixon was outspoken oo the racial barriers he faced in the United States in trying to establish himself as a conductor. He ruefully told of the insults from one concert manager after another, ranging, he said, from polite protestations that there was little work for any conductors to ridiculous suggestions that he conduct in whiteface, wearing white gloves.

So it was with ambivalence that he returned to the United States to mount of the NBC Symphony Orchestra. In 1941, a podium for the first time in 21 years he became the first black to direct the in 1970 as guest conductor for a series of free New York Philharmonic summer concerts in Central Park. In the fall, he also led the Philharmonic at Lincoln Center. He observed then in an interview that he had been the first black to direct the Philharmonic in 1942 at Lewisohn Stadium and it got him nowhere then.

Friend in Washington ...

Six months ago, with the Democratic Presidential nomination still very much in doubt, Mayor Beame, taking a considerable political risk, endorsed Jimmy Carter whom he described as "a friend" of New Yorkers, sensitive to the needs of this and other cities.

A week ago, at a massive rally in the garment district here, candidate Carter predicted "a great future for New York" and pledged: "I'm going to do everything I can for you when I'm elected."

New Yorkers are not so naïve as to expect that the Carter victory will automatically open floodgates of Federal largesse. Although his enthuaiasm for the urban cause waxed as the days of the campaign waned, the Democratic candidate was always careful to avoid specific commitments. He has not yet, for example, embraced the Rohatyn plan for Federal guarantees of municipal bonds, nor has he fully endorsed the idea of a full Federal takeover of welfare. In the less embattled early daya of his candidacy, Governor Carter once warned that he would not favor special treatment for New York.

Nevertheless, President-elect Carter has clearly shown bimself to be far more responsive than President Ford to urban needs, especially to the acute human problems that underlie much of the nation's-and this city'surban distress. Noting that many cities are faced with declining revenues, shrinking industrial bases and a lack of bousing, the President-elect indicated he would aeek in New York "a test of whether these trends can be reversed." Toward this end, he has promised to hold an early meeting with Governor Carey and Mayor Beame to begin preparation of an urban agenda for his new administration.

That is a task to which all of the nation's governors and mayors should quickly rally. New York City's problems are unprecedented in urgency and magnitude, but by no means unique. They are national problems. A new President who responds to that reality would truly be a friend in the hour of New York's and urban

... No Change in Albany

The Democrats picked up two seats in the State Assembly Tuesday, giving them a huge majority of 90 in the 1S0-member house. But the Albany legislative picture has not changed significantly. The Republicans strengthened their control of the Senate - and thereby their power to veto Governor Carey's proposals and defeat legislation of importance to New York City.

A divided Legislature, which can provide a useful check against administration excesses, is not necessarily a bad thing so long as the blocking majority in the Senate uses its power with discretion. Unfortunately, Senate Republicans through their refusal to modify regressive rules have delegated that power to one man, Warren M. Anderson of Binghamton, the majority leader.

Although Senator Anderson generally has assumed a responsible position vis-à-vis the city's and the state's fiscal crises, be has not been above taking advantage of the city's plight and his exceptional position of privilege to promote special, unwarranted advantages for upstate and suburban constituents at the city's expense. This has been notably true in the area of school aid.

Mr. Anderson also has acted irresponsibly, in our view, in calling for tax cuts at a time when the state's budget remains perilously unbalanced and in repeatedly underestimating the seriousness of the state's own fiscal

The power of the opposition ought not be concentrated in just one man, a flaw which we hope the Republican caucus, led by its New York City members, will seek to correct when the time comes to adopt new Senate rules in January.

The Regents Strike Out

fn demanding the resignation of State Education Commissioner Ewald B. Nyquist, the Board of Regents has given proof of its steady deterioration as a responsible, nonpolitical governing body. The effect of this move can only be to undercut education's support in the Legislature and among the public at large.

It would be naive not to suspect a subtle connection between the viewpoint of the anti-Nyquist Regents and the recent attack on Mr. Nyquist by Commerce Commissioner John S. Dyson, who has accused the state's top education official of acting like a "king." There is nothing new about such resentment of the Education Commissioner's independent role; but the jealousies aroused by that role do not alter the fact that independence of the chief school officer is a corollary of the fundamental principle of education's freedom from political interference. The Regents, more than any other agency, ought to understand that principle and defend it.

The basic question ought not be whether Mr. Nyquist may have offended some of the board's members by showing them insufficient deference. Nor is agreement or disagreement with all of the Commissioner's views or actions the real issue. It is to Mr. Nyquist's credit that he does not consider himself as either the Regents' or the Governor's rubber stamp. If there are irreconcilable policy differences between the Commissioner and the majority of the Regents, that would constitute a genuine issue, but it should be openly discussed prior to any move to seek Mr. Nyquist's resignation.

Those who would like the Commissioner to step down appear to feel that he has stirred up trouble by pursuing too activist a policy in such areas as civil rights, in which some Regents would like to call a retreat. The Commissioner bas hewed a steady course of enforcing the law, particularly in the matter of school integration: it is the Regents who have veered from that course.

The ten anti-Nyquist votes on the 15-member board appear to represent a coalition of some who consider the Commissioner too liberal and others who, fearful that the Legislature may want to reduce the powers of the Regents, may want to make a sacrificial lamb of Mr. Nyquist.

Theodore M. Black, the board's chancellor, has quite properly refused to join the ouster move. He thus remains in a strong position to bring his dissident fellow-Regents to their senses by making it clear to them how potentially harmful their vindictive action would be to the Independence of education and to the effectiveness of any future commissioner.

U.S.—No Trespassing

Evidence is mounting that secret police agents of some foreign powers routinely spread terror among their countrymen who reside as aliens in the United States. In some instances, such barassment is extended to naturalized or even second-generation American citizens.

Federal authorities are investigating charges that South Korean intelligence agents and diplomats are violating the rights of Korean aliens and of Korean-Americans. The Shah of Iran admitted in a recent televised interview that agents of Savak, his secret police, are spying on Iranian students in the United States. Similar activities have been alleged to be engaged in by agents of the Chilean junta and of the Taiwan Government.

American investigators of these charges have complained that cloudy legal provisions governing foreign diplomats make it difficult to put a stop to such odious activities. The obstacles ought not to prove insurmountable. Demanding the withdrawal of foreign diplomats who violate the laws of their host country is an old tradition in international affairs. It should be used against any embassy or consular officials found guilty of harassing or coercing the political opponents of the regimes they represent. If existing laws governing illegal police activities by foreign nationals in the United States prove inadequate. Congress should enact the necessary legislation to rid this country of such intruders.

The civil rights of Americans, regardless of their national origin, must be fully protected against the cvil outreach of foreign potentates. Equally important, the right to political asylum, so fundamental to America's role as a protector of freedom, must not be nullified by the iong arm of any foreign government.

Puerto Rican Surprises

Puerto Rico's election this week produced two striking results significant for the island's constitutional status. its links with the United States and its frequent role es unwitting international whipping boy.

The first of these was the unexpectedly decisive victory of the New Progressive Party, which hopes to make Puerto Rico the 51st state of the Union. Losers were the incumbent Popular Democrats, defenders of the island's 24-year-old Commonwealth status.

The other surprise was the relatively poor showing of the Puerto Rican Independence Party despite economic conditions-raging inflation, high taxes, an unemployment rate well over 30 percent—that had been expected to enhance its prospects. A fourth group, the Marxist Puerto Rican Socialist Party, which also favors independence, polled an inconsequential vote.

Puerto Rican results are unofficial and complicated by a proportional representation factor. But it is clear that Carlos Romero Barceló, 43-year-old Yale graduate and Mayor of San Juan, has decisively defeated Governor Rafael Hernandez Colon and led the New Progressives imio firm control of both houses of the legislature as well as of many important municipalities. The pro-statehood party also elected the Resident Commissioner, who represents Puerto Rico in the United States House of Representatives. Governor-elect Romero's victory does not presage an early bid for statehood by the island Government. He said during the campaign that Puerto Rico's political status was not an election issue; that the New Progressive priority would be the rebuilding of the economy. But his accession may doom a blueprint backed by Governor Hernandez for considerably expanding the island's political autonomy in a "Compact of Permanent Union Between Puerto Rico and the United States."

The Ford Administration had stalled action on the compact for more than a year as a favor to the New Progressives, who are linked to the mainland Republican Party. President Ford had supported Mayor Romero: Governor Hernández had been endorsed for re-election by Jimmy Carter.

It was undoubtedly the severe depression and Mayor Romero's effective campaign on economic policy end government idefficiency, rather than the question of political status, that produced the New Progressive sweep. Still only 40. Governor Hernandez will certainly continue out of office his fight for an expanded and refined Commonwealth relationship with Washington.

For the fifth straight quadrennial election, well over 90 percent of Puerto Rico's voters have supported the parties that favor permanent union with the United States. And those United Nations delegates who, at Cuba's behest, annually demand "self-determination and independence" for Puerto Rico should note that in a free exercise of self-determination, only about 6 percent of the island's voters supported independentiato parties.

Mass Transit: 'Misleading' R.P.A. Summary 'Exploited'

To the Editor:

Your Aug. 23 Page One beadline "Doubling Transit Use in Cities Found Unlikely to Lessen Autos" referred to a summary of a yet-to-be released technical report by the Regional Plan Association, R.P.A. released its summary without evidence for many of its statements. The association has chosen words to describe the report's conclusions which could be characterized as anti-mass transit.

For example, R.P.A. comments that cutting fares or improving services is of benefit to those who cannot or prefer not to drive, "and they require increased subsidy." The afterthought about subsidy reflects an attitude that non-drivers who cannot afford, or prefer not to own, an automobile are not entitled to a decent public mode of transportation. The association bas thereby chosen to consider support of mass transit in terms of a subsidy rather than as an essential expense, such as education or police. Such an attitude could bardly be based on its data. R.P.A. also says: "Even if only a minority of Americans prefers urban-ity . . ." and then identifies this minority as including "childless households, both old and young, who often are willing to give up space in and around their bome to be near the action." It has chosen phrases that denigrate urban living, particularly for families with children. This should delight those who await the collapse of our urban centers.

The report summary is misleading in other ways. It presents figures for all United States urban areas, which indicate that 96 percent of all motorized travel is by automobile, with only 4 percent by public transportation. However, these figures include very small communities as "urban areas." In New York City, over 60 percent of journeys to work are on public transit; in Chicago and Washington, over 35 percent. The summary emphasized locating jobs and services in downtown areas as the best way to raise transit use and lower auto use. But New York City's problem is maintaining and improving its transit system to prevent continued drift of offices away from downtown and depression of the office rental

The summary is a disservice to the people of this city who rely so heavily on public transit for their livelihood. ARLINE BRONZAFT, STEPHEN DOBROW JOHN TEPPER MARLIN

New York, Oct. 26, 1976 The writers are, respectively, associate professor at Lehman College, president of the Committee for Better Transit ond president of the Council on Municipal Performance.

To Save the Doomed To the Editor:

The fundamental question of whether the state has the right to take human life is before our country once again because of U.S. Supreme Court decisions of July. There is a substantial body of belief that the state bas no such right.

There is also substantial evidence that resort to capital punishment reflects a desire for revenge rather than a commitment to justice. Further, there is no conclusive evidence that the death penalty deters crime.

The death penalty falls most beavily on poor and non-white people as a result of their lack of equal access to legal and other resources and as a reflection of the lesser value society assigns to their lives.

While these matters are being urgently considered across the country by religious groups such as ours and by others, the nation's governors can use their powers to assure that none of the hundreds of buman beings on death row die. Complex Urban Malady To the Editor:

Secretary Carla Hills's rebuttal on revenue sharing (letter Oct. 27) concludes with the statement: "We all know that excessive taxation of property has led to abandonment and disinvestment, which are the most frequently cited symptoms of urban illness While general revenue sharing bas supported the fiscal base of communities and, to that extent, reduced pressure on property taxes, may I suggest that the causes of abandonment and disinvestment are far more complex than expressed by Secretary Hills. Unfortunately, we do not yet have an adequate set of policies and funded programs designed to revitalize the weakened inner-city housing markets and correct the social and economic pathologies contributing to decay. The instances where a decrease of the exclusion by $5,000 to $10,000, together with the removal of tax credits on nontaxed income and gross-up of the applicable rate can lead to a $15,000 tax increase (as figured out by a wisely unidentified accountant) will be limited to the most astronomic incomes and some

Medicaid Cost: 'To Stop the Hemorrhage'

To the Editor:

I agree wholeheartedly with your Oct. 13 editorial which expressed concern about Medicaid fraud and the need for legislation to rectify the admioistrative deficiencies in the law. I have introduced legislation to tighten

The legislative process is time-consuming. However, there is a step that we can take locally now, to stop the hemorrhage of millions of dollars from the Medicaid program.

I recently completed a study of the New York City Medicaid payment system. Approximately 3,200 people are involved in the administration of Medicaid at a cost of $62.5 million Yet, it is estimated by a Schate committee that New York City will lose $74 million this year because of Medicaid fraud by patients and providers and though affording coverage to Medicaid ineligibles. Since 1973 the Human Resources Administration has been sitting on recommendations made by its own staff, the Mayor's Office of Management and Budget and the State Welfare Inspector General that H.R.A. contract with a fiscal intermediary to administer the Medicaid claims program. The implementation of such a system would cut administrative costs by an estimated $50 million. It would employ computer profiles to check for patient and provider fraud. This program would also provide the city with a management and cost-control capacity that is presently lacking. The fiscal intermediary plan ia presently operating effectively in Arkansas, Florida, Maine, Massachusetts, North Carolina and Pennsylvania.

If the Medicaid program is to be saved from disaster, strong administrative leadership and hard-headed fiscal management must be demonstrated.

The mismanaged Medicaid programs give fodder to those who oppose a national comprehensive health insurance program. We must eliminate the mismanagement in existing programs and protect the proposed expanded programs from such practices.

Let the Seller (and Buyer) Beware

By Paul L. Leventhal

WASHINGTON-The Middle East, with its volatile mixture of regional warfare, terrorism and revolution would seem to be the last place on earth to export nuclear reactors.

The United States and other major nuclear suppliers find themselves caught between the insanity of treating power reactors as commercial commodities and the necessity of protecting the billions of dollars and thousands of jobs committed to their nuclear industries. They are now meeting regularly in London in a belated attempt to work out competitive ground rules that will permit reactor exports without giving customers access to atom-bomb material generated by the nuclear-fuel cycle.

' Ironically, the Middle East is both a that presents the gravest threat to working out a system that will avoid repetition of errors that led to India's peaceful" nuclear explosion of 1974.

Not much time remains, and there is little cause for optimism. West Germany is already building two nuclear-power plants in Iran, and Franca receouty signed an agreement for construction of two more. The United States hopes to seal a deal for no less than eight reactors in Iran. Elsewhere, the United States has agreed to sell Egypt and Israel two power reactors each, while France is to provide one each to Iraq and Libya.

With these facilities selling for $600 million to $1.6 hillion apiece, it seems unlikely that anything sbort of nuclear war will prevent the sales from proceeding. The pace should be slowed, bowever, to permit establishmeot of a unitorm system of strict export controls and a full exploration of alternative energy options.

Early next year, Congress will receive for its consideration, and possible veto, the agreements under which the sales to Egypt, Israel and Iran are to proceed. A group of 12 senators are on an 18-day study mission to those three countries, with stops for consultations with tha International Atomic Energy Agency (I.A.E.A.) in Vienna, and with nuclear officials in London.

Here are some of the things they should be aware of and looking for:

I. The United States should be prepared to withhold reactor exports until a customer country agrees to forgo reprocessing of spent fuel and to relinquish the custody of this plutonium-bearing material. The average power reactor sold today produces 500 pounds of plutonium a year, enough for as many as 50 Nagasaki bombs after reprocessing. No nonproliferation regime can work unless reprocessing is barred and customers and suppliers alike agree to ship their spent fuel to internationally patrolled depositories for permanent disposal.

2. It is questionable whether the I.A.E.A. inspection and accounting system is adequate to safeguard plutonium contained in speot fuel, aod it is clear that it is inadequate to saleguard the weapons-grade material after reprocessing. The agency has been weakened by feuding at top executive levels, by growing restiveness of its third-world members, by inadequate budgeting and technology for safeguards, by the secrecy of its inspections and audits, and, most seriously, by intimidation of its inspectors by nations baving the right to eject any troublesome ones.

Yet, the I.A.E.A. is perhaps the most competent and professional of United Nations-affiliated organizations. The senators should focus on dangerous weaknesses that can be corrected by greater Congressional support of the 3. Although Iran wishes to conserve world stability and the best hope for Gilt that is too valuable to burn, it burns off enormous quantities of natural gas as a waste byproduct of its pumping operations. This gas could be used for generating electricity.

> Similarly, leaks in Egypt's Aswan Dam are sapping up to half its electrical-generating capacity. If the leaks were repaired, Egypt would obtain more electricity than from the reactors that the United States wants to sell, and at a fraction of the cost. The United States has the technology to capture Iranian gas and to plug the Aswan leaks. The senators should inquire as why this is not being done before reactors are offered for sale.

4. Israel, without its owo fossil and hydroelectric sources, needs nuclear power to be selt-sufficient. Yet it's unsafeguarded Dimona research reactor and plutonium stockpile places a cloud over its peaceful nuclear intertions. Israel has geined strategic advantage through calculated ambiguity about its nuclear capability and cannot afford to open its current plutonium stocks, estimated to be enough for 20 bombs, to I.A.E.A. audit and inspection.

But would Israel, oo the assumption that 20 bombs is enough for its own defense, be prepared to submit the Dimona reactor and all spent fuel produced in the future to LA.E.A. safeguards, as well as to forgo future reprocessing, if this were demanded by the United States as a condition of obtaining peaceful nuclear power?

The senators should explore this possibility because it could lead to universal safeguards and a freeze on nuclear-weapons production in the Middle

Close Election, Divided Country

By Tom Wicker

Anyway yon look at it, the 1976 election was about as close as any in history. Both nationally and in numerous states, the winner-take-all nature of American elections was graphically demonstrated. Just a few votes more than your opposent will bring you all. of, say, Ohio's 25 electoral votes, and 297 electoral votes elect a President just as surely as 497.

President-elect Jimmy Carter's victory appears to have been won by narrow margins in almost every state he carried outside the South Like John Kennedy in 1960, he apparently won fewer states than his opponent in putting together his slender electoral majority but his election is no less decisive for that-although it remains to be seen whether Mr. Carter's narrow margin will inhibit his conduct in office, as happened with Mr. Kennedy.

The closeness of the outcome may also tend to confirm the prevailing myth of the 1976 election-that Mr. Carter "blew" a 30-point lead over Gerald Ford. In fact, no one even remotely familiar with American politics could have believed that Mr. Carter ever had such a lead to blow, although he was given spreads of that magnitude in polls taken at about the time of the Democratic convention. They were misleading in at least three ways.

At that time, Mr. Carter did not even have an opponent, since Mr. Ford and Ronald Reagan were still fighting it out for the Republican comination. Matched against either one of them, the Georgian's theoretical lead was bound to shrink; and when his opponent proved to be an incumbent President, the shrinking effect was magnified. Finally, the big leads reported last summer left out of account the fact that there was still a campaign to be waged. with all its possibilities for error and advantage. Looked at in that more realistic fashion, Mr. Carter probably was never more than, say, 10 points ahead of President Ford.

That is, nevertheless, a sizable lead and there's no question but that Mr. Ford made spectacular gains throughout the fall to produce such a close election. He and his managers waged a remarkable campaign, brilliantly conceived and almost flawlessly executed; aided by Mr. Carter's mistakes, they succeeded in making him the issue rather than Mr. Ford's own dismal record in office.

They did so, it appears at first glance, through diligent use of two issues. The first was the familiar Republican battle cry: Mr. Carter, they said, was a big-spending liberal who fortable.

would tax and tax and spend and spend and inflate and inflate. In a middle-class country whose values have been shaped largely in the Horatio Alger tradition, that is an issue of extraordinary potency, and one which lends itself to the most blatant exaggeration-for example, Mr. Ford'a overblown estimates of the "cost" of the Carter "social programs."

The spending issue also helped the Republicans to exploit a point first raised by Jimmy Carter himselftrust. Because he had not been previously on the national scene or in Washington, because be was of a suspect breed—a Southern Baptist—and because Mr. Carter in the primaries had been more adept than other Democratic possibilities in avoiding the big-spending liberal" label, the Republicans skillfully pictured him as an unknown quantity and managed to equate that with being untrustworthy. In this, they may have been aided inadvertently by a press more wary-in the wake of Vietnam, Watergate and Richard Nixon-of merely transmitting political promises and images. Probably no candidate, as a result, ever was more thoroughly challenged in word, deed and appearance than Jimmy Carter. That tended to emphasize the notion that Mr. Carter was unknown and therefore untrustworthy, although every Presidential candidate is to a great extent an "unknown" before he takes office.

None of this could bave brought Mr. Ford so close to victory as it did had he not been ao incumbent-albeit unelected-Presideot. Manifestly, he was not a spender. Whatever his shortcomings he was not an unknown quantity, hence in the strange logic this campaign he was not untrustworthy. As an incumbent and a known quantity, with an apparently indelible image as a "nice guy" he was not so stringently challenged by the press as was Mr. Carter, and the public did not react as strongly to the questions that were raised about him.

So Jimmy Carter, despite his mistakes, didn't "blow it" so much as the Ford campaign nearly won it. Had Mr. Carter not been a Southerner able to unite the South in his support, be probably could not have been elected, and his slender victory suggests bow closely the country is balanced between the desire for change and reform, and the fear that something will be taken away from the com-

Washington and the Flu

By Albert B. Sabin

CHARLESTON, S. C .- Federal health agencies need public trust in their recommendations, but they are destroying it by their questionable policies in dealing with the possibility of a swine-influenza virus epidemic that existed in March—a possibility that is now practically negligible because the virus has not surfaced anywhere in this country or abroad since the few cases of disease it caused last January.

The March decision to get ready as quickly as possible to meet the potential threat of a full-blown epidemic as early as September or October was prudent, although it was irresponsible to use the scare tactics for achieving this objective by comparing the 1976 threat to the influenza "killer epidemic" of unknown cause that struck in 1918.

Moreover, the method chosen for administration of the vaccine in case of need was totally inadequate for an epidemic that might have struck or for any other major influenza epidemic that would justify vaccination of the entire population on very short

'In view of the changed situation since last March, the recommendation to give some flu vaccine to everybody, however inadequate the selected dose of some of the manufactured vaccines may be for certain age groups and however unnecessary for those over 50 years of age, is contrary to our best nealth interests.

The studies reported last June in the United States and many other comtries showed that almost all persons born before 1929, a period when swine influenza virus was spreading extensively, were already immune as a cally inapparent, infections. Accordingly, I believe it was grossly misleading perhaps irresponsible to tell senior citizens, in a special notice, that "The Public Health Service feels that there could be a major swine fin epidemic in the U.S. this fall and winter unless people get vaccinated."

The use of "unless" is grossly misleading because the present swine flu program cannot possibly prevent such an epidemic from developing if and when-if ever-the 1976 swine flu virus should acquire epidemic properties. If it should, those 65 and over really do not need the swine-flu vaccine, although a better case can be made for the newly emerged epidemic A/Victoria/75 strain that has been spreading extensively in the United States and elsewhere since January 1976—a strain that is most likely to line.

cause much additional influenza during the next cold season because 40 to 50 percent of the United States population, including the older age groups, were found to lack immunity for it last summer.

The Public Health Service recommendations to physicians and health officers to give 200 chick cell agglutinating (C.C.A.) units of vaccine to healthy persons over 17 is grossly misleading because the tests on vaccines produced by different manufacturers showed that: (1) in the 17-23 age group, none of the vaccines had acceptable effectiveness with the 200 C.C.A. dose, the vaccine of one manufacturer was acceptable at a 400 C.C.A. dose, and even 800 C.C.A. units of the vaccines produced by the other three manufacturers were unacceptable; (2), in tha 24-34 age group, the vaccines of two manufacturers were acceptable at 200 C.C.A. units, another required 400 C.C.A. units, and still another 800 C.C.A. unlts.

The people have not been told that if a "swine fin" epidemic does not come this winter, as is now highly probable, the vaccine given now will be largely ineffective if an epidemic come during the 1977-1978 aeason unless the Government proceeds to manufacture an additional 200 million doses of "swine flu" vaccine for another shot a year from now.

Moreover, they have not been told that millions of vaccinated persons should expect to develop influenza anyway during the forthcoming season, because the statistics available for the 1973-1974 season, the most recent year without an influenza A virus epidemic, show that there were in the United States an estimated 55 million episodes of influenza, severe enough to put people to bed for an average period of four days, exclusive result of natural, predominantly clini- of an additional 146 million days of bed disability ascribed to upper respiratory infections and 25 million days to pneumonia.

What is needed is not a change in the initial commitment but a new "strategy to implement it, based on a nationwide organization of volunteer vaccinative teams that would be rehearsed and ready to vaccinate the people in their communities in a few days after receiving notice of a pending epidemic.

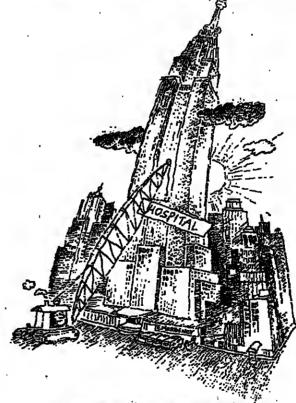

If we cannot do this, we might as

JUST HOW MUCH HOSPITAL DOES THIS CITY NEED?

We may have 4,500 unneeded hospital beds now. And there are more a-building. We at Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Greater New York believe many of these new beds are unnecessary.

And some new technical facilities being installed may be redundant. We think that new facilities should be

We believe in eliminating surplus hospital beds. We have argued in favor of this for years. We're happy to see it happening now. After all, an empty bed costs about 70% as much to maintain as one that's occupied, and it

It's a super x-ray. It can detect certain trouble spots with remarkable clarity and efficiency. It may be the greatest new diagnostic tool in years.

On the other hand, some of its analyses can be done as effectively with existing equipment. And its cost is enormous. We're worried that too many physicians and facilities in the city are going to run out and We've requested stronger legislation to deter that proliferation: Governor Carey has supported the urgent need for such a law. Again,

In a 51-page report, which was largely critical of the $62 million center, the hospitals recommanded that it be opened only as a replacement for an outdated county bospital nearby, its original role, while the proposed tertiary, or specialized, care awaits further study.

This is essentially the position that the Board of Legislators may take as its members wait for a proposed budget that is likely to contain a first-year deficit for the medical center of $9 million to $13 million.

The hospital report was submitted to the board yesterday as the latest action in a dispute with County Executive Alfred

B. DelBello over the facility's role. Doctors and hospital administrators see it as a possible competitor for secondary-care patients, or those normally handled in community hospitals.

Mr. DelBello has rejected that contention, saying it is based on what he feels is a false impression among doctors that the medical center will not be able to fulfill its so-called tertiary role—taking care of highly specialized cases—and thus be forced to fill its beds with second-

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (UP1)-A Na-joital care was the most important single tional Academy of Sciences committee component of medical costs. recommended today that the country reduce its supply of hospital beds, saying that the current surplus contributed to rising medical costs and encouraged unnecessary hospitalization.

The panel of the academy's National Institute of Medicine called for a 10 per-cent reduction in the ratio of hospital beds to people in the next five years. This would require closing 7 percent of the 950,000 existing beds in general hospitals throughout the country, reduc-

Caxton First to Print nglish, and All Because Of Writer's Cramp

LONDON, Nov. 4 (UPI)-Britain is holding a wide sweep of celebrations this autumn to mark the founding of a profitable little business venture in London 500 years ago.

To a degree, you are reading this now because of that venture. It was set up in the shadow of Westminister Abbey in 1476 by an expatriate English businessman in his mid-50's who came home to be near his market. His name was William

Caxton was England's first printer. The first printed book in the English language is his work. He produced England's first printed advertisement, and its first printed poster,

He invented nothing, Moveable type and the printing press originated with Johann Gutenberg of Mainz, Germany. some 25 years earlier, Caxton did not spread instant literacy and had no vast impact on his times.

Yet this anniversary of his move to London has been considered important enough to produce a whole catalogue of commemorative events.

A four-day Caxton International Congress brought scholars from all over Europe to London in September to discuss his work and that of other early printers. The British Library at the British Museum is mounting a major exhibitioo around him, to run through January. Included are many works Caxton printed 500 years ago, some of them the only copies surviving,

The British Post Office issued four Caxton anniversary stamps. There are Caxton Quincentenary exhibitions at the National Book League, in Nottingham, Leeds, Manchester and Cambridge, plus one in London.

What Caxton pioneered—printing— has been called the original seed of the modern world. "Printing is humani-ty's tool, the most powerful it ever had, for good and evil," said one anniversary article. Caxton was the first to use that tool in the English language.

Prologues and Epilogues "Much of what we know about Caxtoo he has told us himself io prologues and epilogues to the books be published," the British Library says. One such note tells us that he turned to printing because of writer's cramp. Caxton was a prosperous, influential cloth dealer in Bruges, io what is now Belgium, when he began dealing in hand-written manuscripts. Fluent in French, he began translating into English "The Recuyell [collection] of the Historyes of Troye." It took him two years. He later recalled "bow his pen became woro and his eyes dimmed with copying the book," according to an anniversary pamphlet from Her Majesty's Stationery Office, which traces its own ancestry to Caxton's work.

He learned the new trade of printing in 1471-72 in Cologne, then set up shop in Bruges. The books he printed there included not only the first one in English—his "Recuyell" translation—but also some of the first French.

In 1476 be came home, "perhaps to be nearer his cilentele," the Stationery Office says. He moved near the court at Westminster and set up under the sign of the Red Pale.

Raising Money for a Fleet

His first known printed work on Eng lish soll was an indulgence sold to raise money for a Christian fleet against the Turks. The only known surviving copy is in the British Library exhibition. He worked steadily at Westminster until he died, in 1491 or 1492, having printed more than 90 books. Two of these, the British Library says, were enough to make him immor-tal—Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales" and Malory's "Morte d'Arthur," the King Arthur legends.

Malory's work was known only from Caxton's book until a manuscript was discovered in 1934. The most complete of two surviving Caxton copies is in the exhibition, on loan from the Pierpont Morgan Library in New York. Ironically, Caxton was never very good at printing. "He was old-fash-looed in his method and always behind to technical achievement," the Stationery Office seys. He never got his rightband margins straight.

But he was an astute busioessman, a gifted translator and a genius as a iblisher. The Stationery Office says he aimed his product at a new market, the "cultured and fashionable English upper class. It was England's first step in the spread of literacy.

Financial officials attributed the demand to new investor confidence in New York City prodoced in part by Jimmy Carter's election. As a result, the agency found customers in national credit markets for all $250 million of its new securities, at an interest rate lower than had been expected. [A1:3.]

Two indictments were banded up against State Supreme Court Justice Andrew R. Tyler. He was eccused of perjury, issuing a false certificate and misconduct. The 58-year-old justice was charged with lying about a meeting with a gambler and of paroling a prisoner on a false basis. He pleaded not guilty and was released on his own recognizance, [A1:2.]

Criminal charges against Manhattan Surrogate S. Samnel DiFaico were dismissed by an appeals court. The fivemember panel found unanimously that the indictment accusing the Surrogate of conspiracy and misconduct had been improperly obtained by Maurice H.

Nadjari. The indictment was defective, the court said, because the charges had nothing to do with Mr. Nadjari's mandate of prosecuting corruption in the city's criminal justice system. [A1:1.]

Wholesale prices rose substantially in October for the second consecutive month despite a drop in food prices, the Labor Department announced. The increase was six-tenths of 1 percent. Wholesale prices of industrial commod-ities, a major trend iodicator, rose 1 percent. This was attributed largely to higher costs for fuels and cars. It was the largest monthly increase in whole sale industrial prices in a year. [A1:4-5.]

A $235 sticker-price cut for the 1977 Gremlin was announced by the American Motors Corporation. The subcompact's new price of $2,995 involves a reduction of about 7.7 percent from the original price and makes the new Gremlin about the same price as the 1976 model and the lowest priced of all 1977 domestic cars. [D7:3-4.]

A plan to merge the record-keeping units of the New York and the American stock exchanges and the over-the-counter market met qualified approval by the Securities and Exchange Commission. The consolidation will probably eventually trim brokerage charges, perhaps up to 41/2 percent. [DI:5.]

Increased membership in the New York Stock Exchange to other qualified brokers and dealers would be possible under a major new proposal. The Big Board's membership roster has been fixed at about 1,370 aince the late 1920's. A top-level committee named by the exchange's board proposed that brokers and dealers gain seats by paying annual dues, as well as by the traditional practice of buying memberships from other members. The plac must be approved by the directors and exchange members, [D1:6.]

Stock prices rebounded from Wednesday's selloff, with the Dow Jones iodustrial average up 3.91 points to 960.44. The advance was led by many blue-chip issues. [D1:1-2.] Credit markets also recovered and interest rates moved down, [D3:1-3.] In commodities, potato futures for November took a sharp drop. [D9:2.]

Rail-Car Floating: a Chancy Bu

Some floats go directly to piers and iodustries scattered all over the waterfront and some deliver freight directly to outboard ships that boist it aboard. An average of 135 rail cars a working day will be taken across the harbor by lugs this year—a total of about 35,000. Yet as recently as 1962, there were 650,000 rail cars making the watery journey, and in 1929 a million. Old-timers like Captain Ilic can remember when there were hundreds of car-floats com-pared with a maximum of 30 in operation today and scores of tugs in the business compared with five now.

Captain Ilic in 40 years on the harbor-the last 10 with New York Dock Railway has encountered all sorts of heavy traffic (in the old days) and plenty of heavy weather. But has never lost a float or a railcar "Not yet." he says laconically, although he recalls that a liner once sliced a gash in a carfloat. The Competing Truck

The real dangers for the float operators decline of the railroads and parts of the port and the massive changeover to huge tractor - trailer trucks running through city streets to waterfront areas-are now at last a matter of grave concern to the city and state. A $20 to $24 million allocation from the state's 1974 rail presentation bond issue authorization, to upgrade and expand carfloat operations as fundamental to the port's welfare, is now near formal approval by the city and state.

Howard Clarkson, director of public transportation assistance for the State Department of Transportation, indicates that money will be made available for a major restoration of the once-flourishing float docks and rail yards to Bay Ridge on the Brooklyn waterfront near 65th Street. Beame Signs Tax Law To Spur Construction

Mayor Beame signed into law yesterday a bill designed to spur the lagging construction industry in New York City with new business and jobs.

The bill, which the Mayor described as "one piece in the larger business puzzle," provides real-estate tax exemptions for renovation or new construction of commercial and industrial buildings.

A new overall economic plan, which the city is to present shortly, will set major policies by the city, which will include legislative changes for new tax incentives and special services to business, a mayoral spokesman said.

The bill would create an industrial and Commercial Incentive Board made up of three appointed city officials. the five borough presidents and three persons selected by Mayor Beame. However, 60 days would have to elaose before the locard could grant certificates of eligibility.

Renovated properties would be granted a declining tax exemption starting at 95 percent of the difference helween assessed valuation after renovalion and the valuation before work was done. The exemption would decrease 5 percent each year for 19 years. For example, if a property was $7,000 tion and $8,000 after, tion would be on the $1,000.

Troubled P.B.A. President

Douglas Donald Weaving

By LEE DEMBART

As Douglas D. Weaving was leaving Le Alpi, an Italian restaurant at 234 West 48th Street, a few weeks ago he spotted a piano in the bar area. "I play the piano," said the president of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, aod, upon being invited by the management to sit down and play, he did. When the la the News rendition of "More," he gave them an encore of "Ebb Tide."

But Mr. Weaving, who has been on the police force It years, tatks about his love for his work and his lifelong background in trade unionism, and he wants to look like a tough guy, not someone who plays piano. "If you write about it." he said, "everybody will be going through that 'Play It. Again, Sam'

The incident revealed a aensitive side of this man that is warm and seldom seen. Not only that he can play the piano—by ear, he said—but also that in the middle of extremely tense negotiations for a new contract with the city, he could put everything aside for a moment or two.

Yesterday, though, the policemen turned down the contract proposal agreed to by Mr. Weaving and the city—as they had the previous contract offer—and Mr. Weaving was left as a leader without followers.

Immovable .Forces

There are those who say that he is not up to the task of running the union, that he has handled the situation hadly from the start and let his opponents in the union dictate his strategy. But there are others who say that no P.B.A. president can extract enough from the city to satisfy the rank and file. The city will not give and neither will the pnlicemen.

Since taking over the presidency last spring when Ken McFeeley, who was and is a close friend, resigned, the 44-year-old Mr. Weaving has been unable to establish his own power base. He seemed tossed by the tides of circumstance. He did not lead the unruly police demonstrations a few weeks ago, but, faced with internal political prob-

Douglas Donald Weaving did not join the police force until he was 33, a year and a half after he was laid off by the Sperry Gyroscope Company, where he had heen pursuing a career in electronics and had been a shop steward, excutive board member and organizer for Local 450 of the International Union of Floritical Workers. of Electrical Workers.

"If there's anyone who can sympathize with a laid-off cop, it's myself," Mr. Weaving said. "I understand the horrors of layoff."

'I Loved Being an Officer'

"When I took the test for the Police Department," he said, "I was looking for a job that provided security. But I found I loved heing a police officer. The friendship. The esprit de corps. It was overwhelming to me. Even though I didn't become a police officer out of any deep desire, after a year I loved the job so much I thought I had wasted the 12 years before."

Mr. Weaving was born in Brooklyn on May 26, 1932, the son of James and Belty Ann Weaving. His father was a member of the Amalgamated Laundry Workers Joint Board, and "from the time I could understand the English language, that's all I heard across the dinner table—contracts, negotiations, the labor movement," he said.

After graduating from Manual Training High School in 1950, Mr. Weaving entered the Navy, where he became a radinman, and when he got out, he studied electronics and went to work for Sperry, lesting and troubleshooting electronic guidance systems.

With the cutback in defense spending, Mr. Weaving found himself out of a job and then in the Police Department, where he was asigned to tha 60th Precinct in Coney Island. Two years later, he was a P.B.A. delegate.

Three years ago, he agreed to run with Mr. McFeeley for first vice president on a slate that upset the incumhent leadership.

Mr. Weaving has been married since 1954 to the former Anne Marie O'Con-nor, whom he met "hanging around the playground" when he was a teen-ager. They live in Flatbush and have a 14year-old son, Douglas J. A postscript to the piano-playing Helen Hull, above, was the first wife of the late Vincent Astor, who pwned the St. Regis Hotel or some time.

By ENID NEMY

Shortly before midnight Wednesday, Pat Harmsworth, Estée Lauder and Doris Stein were at a party at the Wally Findlay Galleries. They looked at one another with little gurgles of delight, clutched shoulders and pecked cheeks. It might be supposed that Mrs. Lauder, the cosmetics queen who is based in New York. Mrs. Harmsworth, wife of the British newspaper magnate, and Mrs. Stein, who lives on the West Coast, hadn't seen each other in some months.

Not so. Scarcely three hours earlier, Mrs. Harmsworth, in a voluminous Oscar de la Renta skirt and diaphanous Zandra Rhodes top, was making pleasurable noises as she spotted the Dior-clad Mrs. Lauder and the boa-wrapped Mrs. Stein at a party on the St. Regis Roof. And just two hours before that, Mrs. Harmsworth, in that same voluminous and diaphanous outfit, was welcoming Mrs. Lauder (same Dlor) and Mrs. Stein (same boa) to her own intimate little apartment-warming on Fifth Avenue, reproductions of English country bouses with every last stick imported from the old mother country.

It was certainly of interest to the 50 or so intimates wandering around and eating shrimp and sausage rolls. Ellen McClusky Long, a longtime decorator, exclaimed over the torioise dining/sitting room; Lee Radziwill, new to professional decorating, exclaimed over a lot of things, and Chessy Rayner, a partner in MAC II, one of the clty's most fashionable decorating firms, kept ber own

Much in a Short Time

Mrs. Harmsworth spent most of her time giving guided tours and explaining that a painter and two little men from England had done everything under ber supervision. It bad taken nine months, she said, and all kinds of admiring sounds were made to indicate that this was a very sbort period of time to do such things as paneling, and intricate plaster work outlined in pink and blue, and creating a red lacquer bar.

After an bour or so, Peter Tufo, Margaret Ryan, Dina Merrill Robertson, Norman Hickman, Sam Spiegel, Andy Warhol and Kay Meeban and others had finished their versation and satisfied their curiosity Besides which, the hostess had another engagement, as did most of them.

Everyone trooped downstairs to collect their coats from the lobby cloak room, a nicety afforded in some of the older luxury buildings and treated with disdain by women who expect to make a proper entrance who they've paid upward of $10,000 for a fur coat.

Mrs. Harmsworth took off for the St. Regis where a $60-a-person dinner-dance was commemorating the 40th anniversary of the botel's Viennese Roof. Mr. and Mrs. Lauder, Mrs. Stein and Audrey and George Zauderer ended up there, too. Surprise.

By now, somewhere around 9 P.M., Col. Serge Obolensky, the 86-year-old doyen of international society, was standing in the cocktail area of the St. Regis, clutching his cane with one band and such as Mimi Herrera of Caracas and Lee Copley Thaw, Cordelia Biddle Robertson, Margaret Hope, Candace Van Alen, Jean Tailer, Sue Whitmore, Josephine Wilson, Sheila Mosler and Noreen Drexel with the other. When Mrs. Harmsworth, Mrs. Lauder and Mrs. Stein walked in, Colonel Obolensky readjusted his cane and his lips.

After an hour of reminiscing about past parties on the Roof, what would have bappened if Ronald Reagan bad been the Republican nominee, and who was going where this winter, everyone marched into the pink dining ng room to eat broiled tomatoes and chicken and dance to Lester Lanin's music.

They also paid their respects to the most unobstrusive guest, Helen Hull, the 83-year-old grande dame who founded the Musicians' Emergency Fund and was the

Advice-Giving Authors Return With New Ideas

Under the beading "Child Care," the shelves at the local bookstore are, as usual, filled with advice-givers this fail. You can tell who some of the most successful are-at least in book sales because they get more than one chance y) catch your eye.

Their benign visages smile out from a series of books, often with similar titles, each book trying to go a little further than the last, trying to touch some new territory to tempt you to own it in addition to the earlier ones. A prominent example is "Doctor and Child," the most recent entry from T. Berry Brazelton, the pediatrician you may remember from "Infants and Mothers" and "Toddlers and Parents." The new book from Delacorte Press ($8.95) is a collection of Dr. Brazelton's magazine pieces over the years, each article followed by some of his more recent thinking on such subjects as prenatal drugs, colic, byperactivity and discipline. And, as in the past, parents will probably find bis thinking worthwhile reading. For instance he is aware that too often parents are stuck with a pediatrician they don't like because they waited until the last minute to find one and then didn't want to switch in midstream. Meantime the relationship be-tween doctor and family isn't helping anybody very much.

Checking Up in Advance

Dr. Brazelton suggests that parents look a pediatrician over in advance of the baby's hirth while there's still "time to skip nnt." He aays that a lot of pediatricians resent that but, he adds,
"I think they are wrong."
In addition to being a writer for parents, Dr. Brazelton is a researcher at the Boston Children's Hospital, and that research bent shows up occasionally in his books.

He tells of how he kept getting pleas for help from mothers whose babies seemed to cry all day and all night. His advice on stopping it helped only little. So, he writes, "As a last resort, I began to ask some of these parents to keep daily charts of how much crying their infants had really done, what time of day, what efforts they'd made to quiet the baby and with what

He found that generally the babies were crying no more than two hours of the 24 and that the more frantic the parents would get in trying to quell it the langer the crying would last. Dr. Brazelson redirected his efforts toward calming the parents instead of the

But it's normal, the authors are saying. And you might as well roll with the punches (within reason). The books are also reassuring about such ness training in the home. P.E.T. is a method expounded by Thomas Gordon, a West Coast psychologist, along with teachers trained by his organization, to belp families deal with conflict.

The method involves approaching conflicts so that nobody wins and nobody loses. It also involves learning to be a bit of a psychologist-parent, using a meaos of listening to children so that they can talk about wbat's really troubling them. Evidently, the method itself has been troubling to some parents. While many have been able to apply it, others have not been able to. They tend to do too much "active listening" and the children get fed up. Or the parents adhere to the rules too strictly, unnaturally, not knowing when to use P.E.T. and when to use normal converstion.

This new book is based on interviews Dr. Gordon's daughter, Judy Gordon Sands, taped with P.E.T. families. The interviews give the parents a chance to describe what went wrong and what went right, and Dr. Gordon gets the chance to respond. The book is intended to stand independent of the earlier one, so there is a good deal of basic P.E.T. material in it. But the earlier book is sull a clearer introduction to

Oversimplification Avoided

An author you probably haven't beard of is Penelope Leach, a British psychologist whose bonk is "Babyhood" (Knopf, $10), and she's mentioned here because she counteracts a potential drawback to a lot of childrearing books. The books are frequently written in a style so simple that it borders on insult And rather that it borders on insult. And rather than clutter up that simplicity with substantiation for the views expressed the substantiation is often just left out. Dr. Leach—as she minutely details the development of babies up to the age of 2-does cite the studies that much of her writing is based on. And she does write in a style that has not been pulverized into pablum,

The book covers such topics as birthweight, sensory awareness, temperament, teething and boredom. And although it is often scholarly it is not without wry observation.

Describing how children learn about their feet, Dr. Leach says: "Success often comes at around the half year birthday, with the feet captured, and put in the mouth for thorough exam-ination. A passion for feet is seldom popular with mothers—there are few things more difficult than changing the diaper of a baby who will suck died three weeks ago.

One source said, however, that Mr.

It was recalled that a similar gangland slaying, which has remained unsolved, in-volved Andimo (Tony Noto) Pappadio, an alleged leader of the Luchese family who was slain Sept. 24 outside his luxurious home in Lido Beach, L.I.

Mr. Licata and his wife, Vita, had driven into the driveway at their home at 73-15 68th Road at about 11:30 P.M. Mrs. Licata said the assailant had left a parked yellow sedan and fired through the front-seat window at her husband. A second man apparently was driving the

But behind the quips and the tight smiles of resignation, the face of baseball was serious as the owners and executives of the 24 teams sat at round tables and tapped toes oo the wall-to-wall carpeting. They were there in a plush room, a place for wedding receptions and fashion shows, for one purpose: to raid one another's payrolls for players who had refused to sign their 1976 contracts.

Not only that, but these were the same club owners who had uoited to fight the players' legal assault on the "reserve clause" in contracts, which for generations had bound them to their teams. Now, having lost the lawsuits, the owners were divided in a bidding war: all 24 teams scrambling for 24 free agents from 13 clubs, for 24 free agents from 13 clubs. The owner who stood to lose the most was Charles O. Finley of Oakland, forsaken by eight players aftar years of winning and soiping. The teams that presumably stood to gain the most were the "rich" ones: the Yankees, who already had spent $3.5 million for Hunter, the Los Angeles Dodgers, who struck gold in California after leaving Brooklyn; the St. Louis Cardinals, a subsidiary of the Anheuser-Cardinals, a subsidiary of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Company; the California Angels, owned by the singing mil-lionaire cowboy, Gene Autry, and the San Diego Padres, who are part of Ray Kroc's McDonald's empire. "I bave a sense of amazement, but not of shock," said Donald Grant, chairman of the board of the New York Mets, who are rich but cautious. "We bave no intention of going crazy." "The sbock set in four months ago," said Joe McDonald, general manager of the Mets, giving his own battle re-port. "The day they announced that Andy Messersmith was free, that was the big sbock. As for what's happening today, it had to be this way. Nobody knows what will happeo now, but it will be enlightening—and expensive."

Far back in the double-tiered room, the world champion Cincinnati Reds sat around a covered table next to a piano. They were there because, hav-ing finished the season first, they now ranked last in the selection process. They also were the only team boycotting the draft because, according to Robert L. Howsam, their president, "nearly all of our players have remained loyal and we are hopeful that we can maintain this relationship in future to our mutual advantage. The Reds already have reached the $200,000 loyalty level with Johnny Bench, Joe Morgan and Pete Rose. Voices Confidence at a News Parley That Carter Will Redeem Pledges in the Democratic Platform

By MAURICE CARROLL

The leesoo of the New Deal-when Franklin D. Roosevelt took Al Smith's State of New York and applied its programs nationally—might be a good guide for the Carter Administration, Daniel P. Moyninan euggested yesterday.

Animated, anecdotal and professorially edmooitory toward some broadcast reporters who had suddenly stopped by now that he had been elected United States Senator, Mr. Moynihan spnke in his first postelection news conference of hie plans to represent New York.

He has talked on the telephone with Maynr Beame and will confer with him soon about the city's continuing fiscal tribulations, he eaid.

He also said he had spoken with an advisor to Precident-elect Jimmy carter and was confident that the new administration would redeem the democratic platform promises on ald to urban areas. and welfare refrom.

And he eaid he had no intention of heing a "dutiful freshman for six years." A questioner suggested that he had alienated some people with his flamboyance as the United States representative et the United Nations.

"I got their attention." Mr. Moynihan replied, and there was a hurst of applause from the etaff members at the news conference in his storefront headquarters on the Avenue of the Americas near 43d

Among the points he made were the following:

It works out so that Brooklyo does oot get the cotton-support money that Alabama does "because you don't grow much cot-ton io Brooklyn," Mr. Moynihan noted. On the other hand, he said, places without subways get mass-transit money and the situation should be examined.

The Rocsevelt Way

Mr. Moynihan, a scholar of politics who likes to discuss what has gone before, said a case could be made that states that led the way on social legislation—

That was what Franklin D. Roosevelt ate's Finance Committee, he said, and he did as President with the piooeering so-cial legislation of Alfred E. Smith as Governor of New York, he said, adding: "I think the same acquence has to come now.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—Good politi-cians run scared. How else explain the huge campaign chests amessed by Conpressional committee chairmen from the New York metropolitan area who were virtually assured re-election? Senator Harrison A. Williams, New York Democrat of New Jersey and chairman of the Labor Political and Public Welfare Committee, raised $650,000. As expected, he breezed to victory in his quest for a fourth term against his Republican opponent, David F. Norcross, who raised $60,000.

Not surprisingly, Senator Williams received more campaign contributions received more campaign contributions from labor groups than any other candidate—$125,525, and an additional $69,723 from business, professional and agricultural groupe. Why did he need so much money?

"You run to win," said James Delaney, Mr. Walliams's campaign manager.
"You do everything the same as you always dn."

Representative Peter W. Rodino of Newark, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, raised $13,525, while Tony Grandison, his Republican opponent, reported less than $1,000. Similarly, Representative Frank Thompson Jr. of Trenton, chairman of the House Administration Committee miced $26,300. ministration Committee, raised $26,399, compared with $16,965 raised by Joseph Indyk, his Republican opponent. People or Unions?

Incidentally, although Mr. Thomp-son's campsign fund was called "Thompson's People," more than half the funds came, not from people, but from organizations, mostly unions.

Perhaps the most needlessly insecure candidate in the entire region was Rep-resentative James L. Delaney of Long Island City, Queens. Mr. Delaney is widely expected to hecome chairman of the House Rules Committee, and ran on the Democratic, Republican and Conservative lines, Mr. Delaney, none-theless, raised $54,085, $25,000 more than 1974, while Alan M. Kluger, his Liberal Party opposent, indicated that he had raised less than $1,000.

Mr. Delaney helieves that his pending chairmanship helped in fund-raising ef-

"We got more money than we expect-ed," Mr. Delaney said. "We heard from people we never heard from before, especially the unions. We never raised anything like that."

Mr. Delaney won reelection to his 16th term with 95 percent of the vote.

The Tuesday-to-Thursday club is a thing of the past, New York City Represeotatives no longer limit themselves to mid-week appearances in Washing-ton. The city delegation continued, however, to have a below-average attendaoce record last year, principally ecause two members were running for the Secate and two others faced tough

DRACULA THRILLS

The Soho Rep, an Off Off Broadway company now in its second seasoo, usually does sturdy stage classics ("Dr. Faustus," "The Great God Brown," "The Merchaot of Venice") and, occa-sionally, a new play, too. Tonight et 8:30 it is opening e work that ie new and old — Jerry Engelbach's stege adaptation of "Dracula," the novel written in 1897 by Bram Stoker, According to the troupe, this version is closer to the novel than the intervening popular "Dracula" shows of stage and screeo. Stoker, the company believes, linked the vampire lagend to eexual fears, psychosexual busicess. This new show, to run weekends, is by no meane e purple evening of theater but does have some "minor nudity" and is oot necessarily recommended for the children. It is a very cinematic, theatrical play with slides and seven or eight actors portraying 36 characters. Tomorrow at 7:30, Sunday at 4:30. Admissioo: $3.50; over-65's, students, $2.50. Soho Rep is at 19 Mercer Street, near Canal (925-2588).

Williams's womeo, she suffered. At the eod of the play, she was picked up by a traveling salesmao.
"Eccentricities' has a long history," Mr. Williams said, perhaps remembering that a version of it was done years ago in summer stock with Edie Adams.

'I was never happy with the way I wrote 'Summer and Smoke'—too maoy extraneous elements, false heroics, too arbitrary. So I stripped the play, rewrote it. Miss Alma is now a stronger, more arresting

Mr. Williams said he had written the first version of "Eccentricities" while "Summer and Smoke" was preparing for its London production. He said he had left the manuscript with a frieod in London, and had not retrieved it for years. He said a version of "Eccentricities" was given in Falmouth, Mass.,

A rehearsal of "Cascando" at the Public Theater this week was a demonstration of the group's artistic democracy. The director asked for suggestions. "In the seance scene a candle will illuminate itself." she said. "I want a crucifix to fall, but I doo't know how to do it."

"I don't like the crucifix," said Frederick Neumann, "but I do like the candle." Discussion continued about lighting, scenery, how to make the stage look more like a room. Finally one of the actors asked the director, "JoAnne, aren't we going to have a rehearsal?"

"This is a rehearsal," said Miss Akalaitis. "This is a look-see rehearsal," explained Terry O'Reilly who was supervising the lights. "We're rehearsing the environment."

Harmony, Not Anarchy

Despite disagreements, the result is not anarchy but harmony. The company is inseparable from its work. In the case of "Cascando," said Miss Aka-laitis, "no one has a record of our version of the piece. It exists only in

The company recently took its per formances on a tour of Europe, playing in Fraoce, Switzerland, Italy and Germany to enthusiastic audiences and critics. "More was written about us in seveo days in Florence than in all our days in New York," said Miss Abalatics

The engagement in Berlin coincided with a visit to that city by Beckett, himself. He was invited to a perform-ance of "Cascando," declined, but looked at the set-a long table on a mock-grass carpet-and listened to a description of the production. "His final judgment," said Miss Akalaitis, "was. 'You have adapted it'." Her version is, in fact, a free-form interpretation, using Beckett's words and her images, in contrast to "The Lost Ones," which is a straightforward, though imaginative, representation of the Mabou Mines has an enormous af-finity for Beckett (it has also staged 'Play," and the dramaticule "Come and Go"), but he is not the sole source of the ensemble's inspiration. The company's work raoges from the verbal to the physical. Last February, in a fieldhouse at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, Mr. Breuer staged "The Saint and the Football Players," a "Sports-Arts" apectacular with a cast of 100, a marching band, a confetti snowstorm, and a ballet of fork-lift trucks.

Among the company's future projects are Mr. Breuer's "The Shaggy Dog Animation," which was e work in progress last summer at the American Dance Festival at Connecticut College, and a piece "constructed" by Miss Akalaitis from her own writings and those of Colette.

There are six performances of "Cascando" every weekend at the Public Theater, at 8 and 10 P.M. on Friday and Saturday and at 4 and 7 P.M. on Sunday. Tickets are $4.

and Apartmeot House 1776," is given its premiere by the mphony Orchestra last week, ry extreme in sound. Cage's creating it were bizacre, ard, but the fact that he used ings by Thoreau and had re-) I Ching chance determioa-

tions did not result in music that is appreciably more cacophonous than some composed by Charles tves. In this work, or in these two works, sioce the composer identifies "Renga" and "Apartment House 1776" as separate entities, there is essentially a large orchestra that provides dissonant background music while vocal and instrumental soloists sing and play tunes out of American history.

Nico Castel sang Sephardic melodies beautifully, Helen Schneyer did Protestant hymns superbly in her extraordinary baritone range, Jeanne Lee provided Negro songs (difficult to hear) and Chief Swift Eagle almost stole the show with his renditions of American Indian music and with great laugh (part of the performance) that was ir-

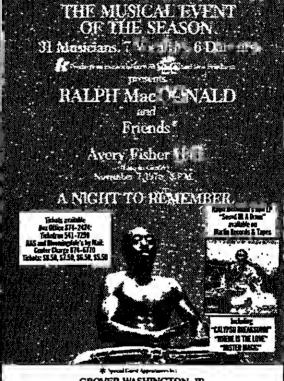

There were also bits of military drumming transcribed from an 18thcentury source book, some rousing fiddle tunes, snappy fife playing and snatches of organ music here and there. Pierre Boulez presided over it all with calm authority and, at the end, brought the composer on stage to share the boos and cheers. Cage, as usual, responded with an air of one whose joy complete.

"Renga With Apartment House 1776" may not be great musical art (which is oot Cage's aim nowadays) but it would be difficult to imagine a lustier celebration of the musical past of a bustling, brawling, sprawling, meltingpot nation than this uninhibited score. When the lights of New York come on, come up.

that she will oever reach that kind of happiness.

Francis Rizzo, who also directed "Saint" at Wolf Trap, and in Baltimore, where the city opera production origi-nated in 1973, thinks Miss Malfitano, who was not brought up as a practicing Romao Catholic, may have to find or invent psychological explanations to feel empathy for Annina. But that is fine with him. "She plays a very human girl, not a two-dimensional saint," he said "She's thought about the vole said. "She's thought about the role. She's a director's dream."

When "The Saint" was first staged at the Broadway Theater in 1954, The New York Times sent hoth its drama critic and its music critic to review it. Brooks Atkinsoo called it "a magoifi-cent theatrical experience." Olin Downes praised especially the first two acts, "set off with music that most dexterously underscores every word of the dialogue—and ever instant of the

Neither critic thought the work flawwith one a decade later. When "The Saint" was revived by the City Opera at the City Center in 1965, Howard Kleio, a reviewer of The Times, called it "melodrama," and found Annina to be "a cliché."

Mr. Menotti, gracious and droll, shrugs off the tendency of critics io recent years to downgrade his works. "A critic is always right—as long as he is alive," said Mr. Menotti. "A composer can be right only after his death—for a work, to be great, must have the quality of endurance.

"Only the future will say who is right or wrong. My 'Saint' so far (touch wood), enjoys good health and I have a suspicion that it will survive me and my critics."

As for charges that he sensationalizes, Mr. Menotti observed, "There is nothing particularly sensational about the li-bretto of The Saint." There is one murder, which, for an opera, is being rather conservative. Besides, murders have be-come our daily hread.

"As for it being melodramatic, we Italians are melodramatic. By being melodramatic, we are simply being ourselves." Asked if he agreed with admirers who consider the "Saint" to contain perhaps his most heautiful music, he said, "A good father shouldn't play favorites with his children. But surely The Saint' is musically stronger than let us say either The Consul or The Medium."

Like most of Mr. Menotti's works, "The Saint" reflects a tension between faith and reason, which Mr. Menotti acknowledged, exists within himself.
"At the end of the opera, Amina and Michele go their own separate ways— and I make it clear that there is no area in which the two paths can meet. area in which the two pains can meet.

By the way," he added, "being both Michele and Annina is no fun—and I hope that my music portrays the anguish of it."

Mr. Menotti sald that the accusation

Richard Nixon? That's something we'll never mow, but we will soon have the chance to see if Glenda Jackson can play Sarah Bernhardt and Richard Nixon. "The Incredible Sarab," starring Miss Jackson as the tempestuous French tragedienne, upens at the Festival Theater today, and "Nasty Habits" will have its premiere shortly after the Christmas season. Based on Muriel Spark's "The Abbess of Crewe," "Nasty Habits" is set in an unconventional Philadelphia convent whose Machinvellian mother superior is given to hugging the premises, from the poplar trees to a precious statue of the Infant of Prague. Only a sleepy Samoan could miss the parallels to Watergate, especially when the deposed but unrepentant Miss Jackson hids farewell to a batch of reporters by saying, "Well, you won't have Sister Alexandra to kick around any more."

The versatile British star, who won Oscars for "Women in Love" and "A Touch of Class," spent some time in New York the other day discussing her two new, dissimilar roles. "I'm not sure I would have enjoyed living with Sarah." said Miss Jackson, a commanding, piercing-eyed figure in a navy blue suit, crimson turtleneck, and a starkly short, slicked-hack hairstyle. "But she did have an extraordinary taleot, and her talent was for living, not dying. That talent, however, took its toll on the people around her, as well as on herself."

Miss Jackson, the recently divorced mother of a 7-year-old soo, has paid her own dues as an actress, hut sha does not regret going on the stage. "The exciting thing about acting is that it is an unknown territory. You can never really learn it, and that is essential for someone of my temperament, someone who is easily bored. Acting just iso't something that you can switch on."

Miss Jackson was nearly awestruck by the late Edith Evans, who-in her fical performance-plays the manipulative nun whose death sets in motion the dirty tricks which turn the convent into a travesthe dirry tricks which turn the convent into a travesty of Watergate. "She was magical, and amazingly vain, flirting outrageously with the men on the set," Miss Jackson recalled. "The idea of being a great actress in the twilight hours of her life dido't appeal to her at all. At the end of the shooting, Geraldine Page said, 'I want you to know. Dame Edith, how much it's meant to all of us to bave had the privilege of working with you.' Dame Edith shook her head and grumbled, 'Oh, you young girls have no idea of what I was like at my hest. You should have seen me play Rosalind in "As You Like It." You wouldn't have helieved it. Mind you, I was in love with Michael Redgrave at the time, which helped a hit."

Dazzling as the cast may prove to be in "Nasty Habits," moviegoers are apt to leave the theater buzzing about plotting plumbers, laundered money and erased tapes. Did Miss Jackson have former President Nixon in mind when she delved into the character of Sister Alexandra? "I must say, he was a presence on the set, especially when I sack the two muos on television and then say, They are two of the finest nuns I've ever heen privileged to work

Miss Jackson yearns for the privilege of playing a complicated, truly feminine modern woman, but she is pessimistic about her chances. "We have a lot of good writers today, but not one of them can write about women," she complained. "They can't seem to realize that they themselves are not God's sift to the world, that women are carable of engrity. gift to the world, that women are capable of energizing anything, except maybe putting a spoke in the man's wheel. Either we are the sex object or the sex goddess, the mother or the whore."

"To be perfectly honest, I don't think acting is very hard. They say the most important thing is to be able to laugh and to cry. Well, if I liave to cry. I think of my sex life, and if I have to laugh, I think of my sex life."

Nevertheless, in his next film, George Burns, who won an Oscar for his dramatic debut at the age of 80 in "The Suoshine Boys," will he faced with a challenge which would reduce lesser actors to quakes of inadequacy. Starting next mooth, he will play the title role in "Oh God," Larry Gelbart's comedy-drama which will he produced by Jerry Weintrauh, directed by Carl Reiner, and co-star a nonsinging John Denver as the spiritually troubled supermarket manager who is given a comforting pat on the shoulder hy the divine, down-to-earth Mr. Burns.

Playing it strictly human in his dressing room at the Sands Hotel in Las Vegas, the octogenarian showman votunteered some choice comments on his latest movie assignment. "I doo't thiok I'll smoke a cigar in the movie." he said, "because I don't think God smokes. And I plan to play this role without makeup. There won't he any love interest, either, because—so far as I know—God was never married. This is a bigger and tougher role than I had in 'The Sunshine Boys,' so I'll have to do a little studying. I've done soft-shoe before, but this is the first time I've ever played God, and there'll be a lot of long speeches. But, as Spencer Tracy once said, 'All you have to do is remember your lines and don't bump into the furniture."

Although acting appears to be a snap for Mr. Burns, many viewers were astonished by the warmth and depth he brought to the role of the ex-vaudevillian in "The Sunshine Boys." How did he go about picking a follow-up to his initial dramatic triumph? how many jobs are there for a man of a part in 'The Sunshine Boys' fitted my age, truth is I'm a little older than God. Let's I enjoy doing anything in show business. The ness has been good to me. What other bust there where a man my age can walk out on smoke a cigar, sing a few songs, tell a few and wear lipstick? Also, I'm tickled to deat working with John Denver. He's a nice little Resides he sings in my key." Besides, he sings in my key."

A Weekend (or so) With Garbo

By JOHN RUSSELL

Greta Garbo made, in all, 32 films. Twelve of the best of them will be shown at a Garbo Festival that begins at the Quad Cinema, 34 West 13th Street, this Sunday and goes on through Nov. 27. They range in date from "Flesh and the Devil" (1927) to "Two-Faced Woman" (1941), and they come

It is a wonderful experience to see these films. Garbo has not made a film since "Two-Faced Woman," and not too many of those who were addicted filmgoers at every stage in her career are still around today. (How many of us can boast that we saw all five of the films abe made in 1929 at the time of their first appearance?) Often ber of their first appearance? Often ber films demand a leap of the historical imagination, in that they are ridiculous, by any standard: badly written, badly directed, grotesque in their general as-sumptions, wretchedly acted by almost everyone but herself. Waiting for her to come on, we wonder why on earth we are there. Yet when she does appear, we ahould hate to be anywhere

A good example of this is "Flesh and the Devil," the only one of her silent films to be abown at the Quad, it opens the series on Sunday with her first talkie, "Anna Christie." "Flesh and the Devil" begins as a comedy of bar-racks life, with John Gilbert and Lars Hanson as two handsome and highspirited cadets who are united hy the kind of brotherly love that was taken as chivalric in 1927 but looks distinctly more ambiguous today. The Austrian background is quite deft—small-town parade-ground, atailions flicking their tails, local trains that stop at every station, lakes that even Ludwig of Bavaria would have thought romantic— and there is a nice sense of young livea waiting to take shape.

And what young lives! John Gilbert at that time was one of the best-looking men in America. (He was also the star of the movie. His name was in hig letters above the title; Garbo's was in small ones a long way below.) Lars Hanson could bave been Pushkin's Eugene Onegin come back on earth. The two men were like explosives that functioned on a very short fuse.

It belps not to hear what they have been saying, of course. The allent film was a dream world in which nothing was explained, nothing was justified, nothing was led up to. One look from Garbo, and the two mettlesome young cadets with their startlingly heavy eye makeup were fit to be trussed and tied. And Garbo herself, at 22, had already

"The Slipper and the Rose: The Story of Cioderella" is a movie to turn a

There aren't that many films one can take small children to these days that "The Slipper and the Rose" should be dismissed. It's harmless, I guess, but it goes on so long - 128 minutes-

This was a free, large-scale performance. Mr. Berman, employing a rich and sonorous tone, avoided a literal approach. He used well-chosen ritards that are not written into the music but which are part of the convention of the times; he was not afraid to emphasize an inner voice or two; he sang out the second movement in a simple, reflective manner, with delicate touches of rubato; and he even had some fun with the burlesque intermezzo of the third movement—a passage that most pianists these days

Above all, there was color. Mr. Beran amazing degree of shading and va-riety into his playing. The one defect in his palette is a hit of clanging quality when he cuts loose at full volume.

But, then again, few pianos are built to take the kind of onslaught that Mr.

Berman unleashed in the 12 Liszt

Accident of History

It is a mysterious thing, this continu-ing thraidom. Fascination can be a generational matter: this year's fascinators are next year's frumps. It can spring from a national need: we can all think of English actresses, French actresses and German actresses whose careers bear the stamp "Not for Export." It can spring from a sudden shift in manners, of which one man or woman is the incarnation. And when fascination goes out of style, we look with pity, or at best with a detached historical interest, on the people who once exert-this tribute will be the k singer who was an tar, whose reputation ance and then traveled eer spanned more than tertaining until her death in 1974.

Josephine Baker came to Paris in 1925, a tawoy, wide-eyed, long-legged teenager. In the years that followed, she gave the French black America's culture: "Le Jazz Hot," the Charleston, the Black Bottom, the rhythms the blues. And she did it with sophistication and style.

On stage she was both earthy and regal. When she was past 60 years and still performing, critics said she "made a fool of time." She sang and danced well: she conversed in several languages from the stage; and she looked radiant, draped in France's highfashions. This, combined with the way she stepped, slunk, or moved on stage, brought her fortune and fame.

Early in her career, she had received 40,000 love letters and more than a thousand proposals of marriage She married at least three men. Wedding the French citizenship that she prized. "France made me what I am." she once said. When she died on April 12, 1974, she was estranged from her last husband, Jo Bouillon, an orchestra

Began in Chorus Lines She began her long career as a dancer in chorus lines in St. Louis, Philadelphia and New York, where she appeared in "Shuffle Along," hy Noble Sissle and Eubie Blake one of the first black Broadway musicals. The poet Langston Hughes, who saw her, re-called later: "There was something about her rhythm, her warmth and her impudent grace that made her stand

The international Baker legend began in 1925 with her debut in Paris. She appeared at the Theatre des Champs Elysées wearing only a flamingo feather. A year later she hung a string of banenas around her waist.

"There was a time when Miss Baker's appeal to the Parisian was due in the main to her exoticism," wrote a journalist in 1931 when she starred in the Folles Bergère and was France's highest paid entertainer. "She has a figure that looks best when she has little oo. And she can wear little with the naturainess of a lithe and splendid animal. There was in her singing and dancing also something of the untamed animal that touched the heart of the ultracivilized Parisian

"Then she toured the world for two and one-half years. And what a change. . . . She has mastered French. She also speaks in Spanish and Italian. To see her doing dramatic parts, doing them not merely with skill but with a power and sensibility which hold the audience spellbound, is to wonder whether it is the same Josephine who showed the Parisians how to dance the

At the same time, nothing Miss Baker did on stage surpassed what she did offstage. She carried a pet panther into a Paris music hall, functioned as an espionage agent for the French resist-ance during World War II and was a ous national and religious backgrounds.

By then, Miss Baker had succeeded in one of her ambitions; "to become known" because "it opens many more doors to you." She was also respected mitment to brotherhood and humanity. She had said that she went to Paris for freedom. And once she had it, she used it.

Combining this freedom with what her friend Mariene Brody - who along with Jocelyn Jocya conceived the idea for this American tribute-called her "enormous personal prestige," Miss Baker supported and defended principles and causes she believed in.

She attacked racial segregation in Las Vegas and Miami-encouraging black patrons to come into Las Vegas night clubs at a time when their patronage was not wanted. She insisted that her audiences in Miami be seated on a nonsegregated basis. She struck out at racial discrimination in Oakland, Calif., where she urged jobs for blacks in the public transportation system. In New York, she crossed swords with the owner of an elite night club after she felt she had been discriminated against. And she spoke out against anti-Semitism everywhere.

Her plans for a 300-acre estate that she had purchased in southwest France for herself and her adopted children were sbattered by bankruptcy. Princess Grace later helped her to buy Riviera villa at Roquebrune-Cap-

Miss Baker admitted that she was not good at managing money.

"Human beings have done a lot for me," Miss Baker once told an inter-viewer. "Hard experiences have taught me to respect others, and that is why perhaps I love them so much. Will I go on? How can I stop? If I could, I wouldn't I owe it to what I believe in-the idea of universal brotherhood."

had at $9.50 seemed exactly right for the food. Dessert lovers would be wise to save room, for the array at Le Biarritz is irresistible. Homemade strawberry tart with the flakiest of puff pastries and a gateau St.-Honore—that wondrous combination of puff pastry, cream puffs, caramelized sugar, custard and whipped cream, rightly named for the patron saint of pastry chefs-are both regular specialties bere.

There is also a dark, rich chocolate mousse, certainly among the city's best, and a passable if not inspired creme caramel. The only disappointing des-sert was pear in wine, with a somewhat metallic taste to the fruit and an oversweet syrup.

But perhaps the most astonishing dessert is the rice pudding, baked just loog enough to have a golden-brown top, but still soft and creamy within, flavored with a dash of rum and grated orange rind. After that it is worth spendiog ao extra 85 cents for the strong, slightly bitter café filtre to restore your equilibrium and bring you back to earth.

Chung Kuo Yuan, the elegant new Chinese restaurant on Third Avenue near 65th Street, is a place I would dearly love to love. David Keh, the affable owner, who is also responsible for Szechuan East and Uncle Tai's Hunan Yuan, this time attempts to give Chinese food the sort of formal presentation heretofore accorded only French food.

The spacious main dining room downstairs is formally done up in beige, with large tables and com-fortable chairs widely spaced, sparkling Rosenthal china and silver, fresh flowers and equally formal service with much tableside cooking and flambeing.

The only uncomfortable quarters here are the enclosed gardeo room, beated by infrared lamps and so alternately too bot, then too cold, and the stiff and sterile upstairs dining room used at luoch. The real point, of course, is the food, and the dinner menu here lists just 15 entrees, most of which sound urusual, and all of which sound enticing. But the real shocker on the meou is the price range, with those entrees ranging from $9.50 to $26, with most in the $12 to $14 bracket.

Upon presentation, all of the dishes seen proved to be made of fresh, top-quality ingredients, impeccably prepared. The big disappointment comes with tasting, for not one dish bere has anything like the distinction that might be expected at these prices. On one evening we tried three entrees-a steamed fish; sliced duck with fresh asparagus, and sliced venison sautéed at the table, then enveloped in gossa-mer crêpes. The first two dishes were totally characterless, though technically well cooked, and the venison slices were too thick and tough to be bittee through io their crepe coverings.

We fared slightly better on another evening with the two most expensive dishes on the menu. The sautéed lobster with vegetables, at $19.50, proved to be a masterpiece of careful cooking. The meat was taken out of the shell and served in pieces that looked much like soowy shrimp, accompanied by slivered snow peas, flowerets of broccoli and mushrooms, bland again, but pleasant.

The Peking duck, at $26, proved to be, in fact, two entrees, the first, the glassy crisp skio io crepes, prepared for us by the captain.

After that, we were asked how we would like the duck meat prepared and, at the captaio's suggestioo, had it done with vegetables in a hot and spicy sauce, good but much less than great.

luncheon specialties at Chung Kuo Yuao appear for the most part as appetizers at dinoer-the delicate, tiny dumphings most geoerally known as dem sem, which make up the traditional tea lunch. Here again, the craftsmaoship was formidable, But again, both flavor and texture proved uninteresting. As for the tiny, intricate spring rolls, they were all crisp pastry with virtually no filling.

While the more serious students of Chinese cuisine might find this restaurant interesting for its rarefied presentation. I'm afraid that at these prices, the rest of us have a right to expect far more memorable

OWBOYS AND INDIANS, not exactly native to Corning, N. Y., will be a major attraction there when the Rockwell-Corning Museum, devoted primarily to Western American art, opens next week in the small upstate town (pop-17,000) that already boasts one mu-seum, the Corning Glass Center.

The new institution, named for its founder, Robert F. Rockwell, will be housed temporarily in what was once the Baron Steuben Hotel, until its final home, an abandoned Victorian city hall, is ready. The collection of 250 works by Frederic Remington, Albert Bier-stadt, Charles M. Russell, Thomas Moran and company was assembled by Mr. Rockwell, a Corning settler from Colorado, over the last 15 years, a period of peak interest (and escalating prices) for Western Americana. Why an Eastern museum of Western

"Because I live bere," says Mr. Rockwell, forthrightly, "and also because people in the East are interested in Western art. There are only a handful of museums in the country that deal specifically with it, and the nearest thing to this is in Tulsa, Okla." (Note: There is a Frederic Remington Museum in Ogdensburg, N. Y., but it deals only with the work of one artist.) And Paul Rivard, the new museum's young director, points out that, after "Western art was really begun in the East, by Easterners who went West to paint the romantic Indian and Cowboy and their majestic landscape." The collector, born 65 years ago in Paoni, Colo., where his father was in cattle, came to Corning in 1936 on a visit to his grandfather, owner of Rockwell's Department Store (known today as "the Bloomingdale's of Corning") and stayed on, winding up as owner of the store. His collecting drive was spurred in 1960 by purchase of a Remington that turned out to be a fake, Undaunted, he gradually filled the walls of his bome and of the store with works that were the real McCoy.

The museum, actually an arm of the Corning Glass Center, will show 55 works at its opening, including Bier-stadt's monumental "Mt. Whitney." Along with the paintings and sculptures, its four galleries will be stocked with Zuni pottery, firearms, saddles, spurs and cowboy paraphernalia, with one area recreating a turn-of-the-century room of Cowboy and Indian-inspired commercial products that dudes assumed were authentically Western.

What's hilled as a new and different kind of religious art show opens Nov. 17 at that bustling sanctum, the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine. (Amsterdam Avenue at 112th Street). Called the Cartwright Exhibition (for reasons which will soon become clear), it's the first of a series of annuals intended to demonstrate (a) that much contemporary art expresses "religious" values even though not created for houses of worship and (b) that the church need not commission artists to do "church art" because much of what they create is "religious" anyway and should be exhibited in a religious en-

'Most of what we see today is just design and structure, without feeling. I don't mind if artists want to do that, but why should they call it sculpture? Sculpture should be poetry!"

His own approach to this heroic "poetry" nowadays takes several forms. In the drawings and small plaster sculptures there is a highly crutic and very explicit deniction of erotic and very explicit deplctioo of the nude female figure in the throes of passion. (In these works, Leda and the Swan is a favorite motif.) In the larger, monumental works—mostly oo the "Judgment of Paris" themes, but now joined by a new conception of the "Descent From the Cross"—the figures are more abstractly rendered, yet the heroic motif remains a powerful visual constituent of the sculptural image.

Thus, the Nakian ocuvre may be divided into a private and a public poetry—or, let us say, into a division of lyric and epic forms. It is all work of a masterly character that succeeds in making its mythological themes speak once again in a contemporary are now being raised by Archbishop Torkom Manoogian of the St. Vartan Cathedral in Manhattan — a tribute from the Armenian community to one of its most eminent artists, (Mr. Nakian was born on Long Island of Armenian immigrant pareots.) If the project is successful, the work will then go to the Metropolitan Museum, which has already agreed to accept the sculpture for its permanent collection.

It is a little odd, all things considered, that the city of Stamford, which has lately seen something of an architectural boom, does not yet have any of Mr. Nakian's monumental works on permanent probles views But works oo permanent public view. But tonight's homage is at least a salutary act of recognition to this living master. The "Homage to Nakian" begins at 8 P.M., and is free to the public. In this version, more than 49 additional performers have been added to the original corps of company dancers to give expanded scope to this dance of restraint and libertine release.

The Apollonian section was presented first, the Oionysian portion second, and the two were joined in the finale, in which sedate hallroom dancing existed side by side with rock twistings. side by side with rock twistings.

Tucked into the mass tableaux were several hilarious vignettes, one of which featured Mr. Cunningham disguised as a prissy woman lecturer on Greek dance. He hegan in a dowdy coat and crumpled bat, reading from a print-ed lecture when the first ootes of Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" were heard in the background. The stage darkened and a shaft of light picked out Ted Striggles in a faun costume.

Mr. Cunningham's attempts at communication, "Parlez-vous français?" "Sprechen sie Deutsch?" were fruitless until he realized that the creature "spoke" only body language. Their duet developed amusingly as the taogle-footed Mr. Cunningham became more fluidly conversational in movement with the insistent Mr. Striggles.

There were suggestions of Nijinsky's "Faon" in the hizarre encounter of the repressed "woman" and the pagan creature that culminated in a tender embrace. It was a résumé of the entire work, showing the blending of contrary impulses. The world of James Cun-ningham is a child's eye view of life's entanglements in which the incongruous and the apt jostle against one another to produce little flares of intelligent observation amid the seeming

HE HISTORY of a region is more than dates and battles. It consists as well of such mundane things as the crafts people leave behind, their tastes in pewter and pottery, and their tastes in pewter and pottery, and their preferences in hand-tools. Such was the case on Colonial Long Island, which enjoyed a rich cultural history inspired by the Dutch and British colonists and was in turn influenced by their respective mother occupations. countries.

For those who are oot aware that Long Island's history dates back well beyond the building of the parkways, the mansions of the gilded age or the battle that takes the regioo's name, an extraordinary exhibition is now on display in the Art Museum, part of the Museums of Stony Brook, through Jan. 2, which traces the roots of the area's cultural history through the work of its Colonial craftsman. The show, "Long Island Is My Nation: The Decorative Arts and Craftsmen, 1640-1830," provides perhaps the most comprehensive collection of crafts to date from this region as well as a fascinating history lessoo that traces a cultural map of the area in the Colonial period.

The 150 objects in the show were culled from about 6,000 investigated in the society's two-year research effort. They are on loan from about 20 or so major and minor museums and private collections. The chronological assemblage is spare and handsome, with furniture, silver, tools, pewter and ceramics arranged to dramatize sculptural effects. Most have never been exhibited before, and few have ever heeo described so completely. No wooder Dean Frederick Failey, curator of the society, and his associstes describe the show as the first significant attempt to analyze the island's Dutch and English cultural roots.

attempt to analyze the island's Dutch and English cultural roots.

No Decent History

"We discovered that there hadn't been a decent history of Loog Island written since the 19th century," Mr. Falley said.

"The show was done to prove to Loog Island residents that their history began in the 1620's and 30's and not in the 1940's with the construction of the Northern State Parkway," ex-plained Susan E. Klaffky, a research assistant. "Here and elsewhere the growth of suburbia has erased the growth of suburna has classed and past."

But that heritage may be recognized again thanks to such efforts as this show. Mr. Failey said be is now convioced that the cultural roots of Long Island are in many ways as rich as—and io other ways more diverse than in—New Eogland. The proof he has assembled is persuasive, and the selections are admirable. The show iocludes furnishings settlers brought from other colonies and from Europe; a variety colonies and from Europe; a variety of distinctly different designs they ordered locally or from outside sources; and furnishings that originated in workshops from the Flatlands of Brooklyn to East Hampton near the islands fin.

Vienna Between the War Lives On in Binder's Post

In Vicooa between the world wars, Josef Bioder's boldly modern posters became synonymous with Meinl Kaffee, Meinl Tee and Meinl Marmeladen the period's most popular brand of coffee, tea and jam there. To young artists studylog in the Austrian capital at the time, the Bioder style—figural images, strong clear colors and simplified typography—pulsed with a vigor that was oovel to a public wearying of the florid excesses of a commercial art influenced by Art Nouveau. No wonder, then, that the Vienneseborn graphics designer swiftly earned a reputation as an innovator, oot only in Austria, but internationally as well. Binder's work, including his most fa-mous design, the 1939 World's Fair poster, is now on view through Nov. 14 at the Neuberger Museum at the State University of New York at Purchase.

Binder was still a studeot at the School of Applied Art when his success became virtually assured. He en-tered and won a competition spoosored by the City of Vienna for a music and theater festival. The trumpeting figures he chose and the Cubist-influeoced style of the red, blue and black poster proved one of the strongest designs he ever devised. After further demoostrating his skills in posters, packaging, store fronts and corporate logos in Vicooa, and with the backing of Josef Hoffmann, the architect, and Alexander Korda, the film producer, Josef Binder traveled to Berlin, Paris and Loodon. Settled in New York in '36 He made his first trip to the Uoited States io 1933 and lectured from New York to Los Angeles And in December 1936, disenchaoted by the deterioration political situation in Vienna, the artist and bis wife, Carla, settled permanently in New York. At his death in 1972, at the age of 74, Binder was no a return trip to Vienna and was preparing an exhibition of his paintings at the Austrian Museum of Applied Arts.

The exhibition at Purchase Includes several dozen posters tracing the several dozen posters, tracing the artist's development from the trumpet-ing figures of 1924 through much of Binder's post-World War II work, which includes a 1948 "Pax" poster for the United Nations, an abstract study. The selection is comprehensive and adds up to an honest summary of the artist's frequently uneven output. To today's eyes, for instance, his heroic

Art: Small Treasures Of 'The American Experience'

T IS NOT altogether to the good that people are now so infatuated, with American 18th and 19th-century painting. Minor artists are being rated way above their station, prices are far too steep for all but a very few, feelings run hot and high about paintings that are really not worth all the

But there are compensations, even so. That paintings of the first quality are being smoked out all the time is clear from at least two items in 'The American Experieoce" at Hirsch & Adler, 21 East 67th Street. One of them is a crystallice little souvenir of "The Reunion of the Geoerals of the American and French Armies after the Surrender of Yorktown, 1781" by James Peale. This had been in one branch or another of the Lafayette family (and most recently in Turin, Italy) till this year. With its Cuyplike treatment of landscape, its salutary realism (note the two dead horses rotting oo the foreshore) and its vivid likenesses of Washington and Lafayette, this rightly caused a great stir when it came up at Christie's in London this summer.

With John Trumbull's "Garrison of Gibraltar" we face quite another idiom. Where Peale distanced his great men and set them in the context of a laodscape that had reverted in tranquillity, Trumbull takes us into the very heat of actioo. In fect, he made great theater nut of the death of the Spanish commander in 1721 and the well-choreographed attitudes of the British officers as they offered him their professional sympathies.

Not surprisingly, this painting had an enormous impact when it was first . shown in Londno in 1789, Hnrace Walpole thought it "the finest picture he had ever seen, painted north of the Alps," for instance. As that would put it above van Eyck, above Rubens and above Rembrandt, it may seem to us that Walpole was carried away by his enthusiasm. But this is a very impressive painting, nonetheless, with a Berliozian ouality to the scenes of carnage and confusion and a most touching humanity in the portrayal of the British officers, every one of whom comes across as e completely realized

There are some good civilian pictures, too. Devotees of the quiet life will fall upon the little painting of a Brooklyn garden by William Merritt Chase, for instance, and for its date (1915) Walt Kuhn's "Bathers on the Bach" is really very taking in its Beach" is really very taking in its jazzy, schematic, high-enlored and flatpatterned way. Through Nov. 27.

Other exhibitions this week:
Robert Natkin (Emmerich Gallery, 31 East 57th Street): "Pictures of panic, and very like" is what Shakespeare might have said of Robert Natkio's new paintings if he were going round the galleries and knew what Peter Fuller tells us in his foreword to the cata-

Left to ourselves, we might not have gnt it. We might have read these often huge and gently inflected paintings as mod music for the eye: the visual equivalent of that mysterious and all but stationary piece that stands in the middle of Schoenberg's early "Five Orchestral Pieces." Mr. Natkin is an ioventive colorist; one who lets the color wash over us with a minimum (as it first seems) of formal organization.

But then we notice that the enigmatic surface of these paintings comes and goes, now standing out sharp and clear like an alligator's skin, now diffusiog in a chromatic vapor like the "tinted steam" of which J.M.W. Turner was once accused. In this way Mr. Natkin sets up a dialogue between the said and the unsaid, the explicit and the fugitive. Are we being sucked into a many-colored void, or are we being politely but definitively excluded? That is the conundrum that these paintings pose as they bang before us. Mr. Fuller sees it in terms of infant/mother and infant/father relationships, but ... we don't oeed to go all the way with him to think that these are very seductive paintings with much more thought behind them thao might at first appear. Through Nov. 10.

Neil Welliver (Fischbach Gallery, 29 West 57th Street):

A landscape painter who happens to own 1,600 acres in Maine need oever ruo short of subject matter. That is Neil Welliver's position, and we can all envy him his distant prospects of hillside and ocean and his precipi-tous and amply shaded falls of fresh

But what to do with them in terms did. He looks hard and long at nature. (We may remember hnw Millais painted Ruskin doing just that, and how wooderfully Ruskin could recreate the experience on the printed page.)

Next, Mr. Welliver borrows something from the wide screen, and quite possibly something from the formal energies of abstract painting, and he aims to get them all to work together. The distant views don't always escape a certain banality, but there is some-thing genuinely enveloping about the io deose woodland. The scale justifies itself, and we feel as Robinson Crusoe must have felt when be was adrift on his island end had oot yet met up with Man Friday. Through Dec. 4.

Illustrations for "Pride and Prejudice" by Isabel Bishop (Midtown Galley, 11 East 57th Street):

Jane Austen Inoks easy to read, but she isn't. A lifetime is not too long to master her particular mix of irony, deep feeling and sardonic observation. She looks easy to illustrate, but that isn't true, either. Jane Austen was remarksparing with the kind of detail that other novelists ram down our throats with a spoon. Almost every illustrated edition of her work handicaps our enjoyment by pinning down what the author deliberately left up in the air.

But Isabel Bishop is not an illustrator of that sort. She has spent ber life observing young people (see "Recess No. serving young people (see "Recess No. 3," ber latest oil painting, which is also on view at the Midtown), and she knows how to give them a timeless, almost Homeric quality. She has also spent her life observing some of their more disreputable seniors, and she knows just how to set them down, too. So the euguries were good for her illus-tions to "Pride and Prejudice," which together with the text make a very handsome book (E. P. Dutton, $20). The originals are at the Midtown through Nov. 20, and they are giving a great deal of quiet pleasure.

The exterior facades were made of many small parts bolted together to create an unbroken surface and theo often painted to look like stone.

"We try to evoke how grand the work on iron was then," Miss Gayle explains. "The industry developed great skill and craftmanship. Thousands of items were cast and theo carted by dray horses over cobblestone streetswhat a clatter that must have made!to be lifted up and bolted inin place. Little cornice brackets might have five separate parts, they were so detailed.

Stewart's and McCreery

A block south of Grace Church is the site of A. T. Stewart's Department Store, at Broadway and 10th Street, built in 1862. The first department store to be built oo the Ladies Mile, it had a typical central rotunda, a double staircase and continuous organ music. In 1902, a still-standing iron extension was built just snuth and was long the headquarters of Wanamakers department store.

A block north, at 801 Broadway, is the cast-iron building that nuce housed the James McCreery & Com-pany store, and though it is now an apartment house, its exterior has been preserved, and the colonnade of high culumns on the facade, with its Corinthian, capitals and cornice deco-rations, illustrates one of cast iron's most dramatic features, the ability to be reproduced io even fine detail.

The Friends of Cast-Iron's enthusiasm does not limit itself entirely to their specialty. Interesting stooe buildings will also be pointed out along the way. Near the corner of the Avenue of the Americas andd 14th Street, a tall thin building perches incongru-ously. Its sign is almost too faded to. reed, but it is the Beaux-Arts extension of the original Macy's the first store to move out of the Ladies Mile and uptown, in 1902.

B. Altman & Company

Turning up the Avenue of the Americas, the tour passes a particularly fine red cast-iron fire alarm box on 17th Street. From 18th to 23d Streets, Sixth Avenue, as it was then called, with its fiery wooden elevated trains and the 23d Street ferry that brought customers over from New Jersey, was a commercial center of vast department stores and small specialty shops, the-

The best stores had their nwn delivery service, and west of Sixth Avenue were Benjamin Altman's stables, where the merchent kept the 500 horses he himself had selected to be hitched in matched pairs to his shining delivery carts. B. Altman's was the first stare to build on Sixth Avenue, and the glass-dome light court rising six floors through the store's center was a celebrated interior feature.

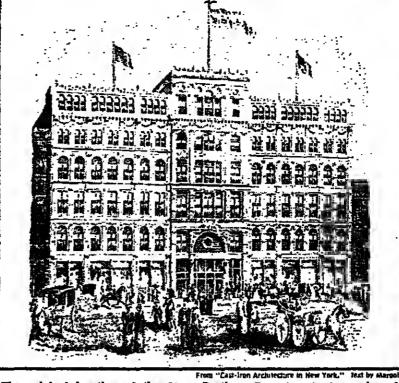

Across the avenue stood the brick and terracotta home of a chief competitor, Siegel-Cooper & Company. Henry Siegel might be said to heve beeo the P. T. Barnum of the trade for, though the stare's facade is ornate enough, the the sinre's facade is ornate enough, the interior was even more lavish. A reproduction of Daniel Chester French's sculpture "Republic," made for the Chicago World Trade Fair of 1893, stood in the center of a fountain just past the columned entrance to the store, and "Meet you at the fountain" became a popular expression of the day. The store's opening in 1896 attracted a The store's opening in 1896 ettracted a crowd of 150,000.

O'Neill and Adams

The Ladies Mile section of the Aveof a vast canyon of imposing from mnuments to mercantilism, and the Hugh O'Neill store, occupying the 20th to 21st Street block on the west side of the aveoue, is one of the most imposing. Its somber, formal look of today belies its flamboyant role in serving yesteryear's working-cless clientele. enormons domes et each end are gone, but the round eod towers remain, and the forthright letters spelling the name of the store in the big triangular cornice are a gbostly reminder of the area's prominence. In the later Beaux-Arts Adams Dry Goods Store, just to the north, is a good example of the integration of cast iron, here into a masonry front, with fluted columns and cast-iron arches. So rich was the trade here that none of the Adams merchandise was sullied with price tags.

Turning right into 23d Street and continuing east, the tour passes the former Flint & Horner Furniture Company. It has e sculptured facade and a hierarchical arrangement of windows, ranging from simple high ones at the bottom to ornate little ooes at the top. Although the store was built by a leading cast-iron architect of the day, was designed not so much for esthetics as to provide maximum light and space.

Across 23d Street, on the south side, et Nos. 32-46, stands the former Stern Brothers Department Store. It catered to both the rich and the working class,

The original location of the Stern Brothers Department store, circa 1892, and the West 23d Street building as it appears today: one of the best preserved cast-iron facades in the city and was the largest store in the area in the 1880's. Doormen in top hats presided over the entrance, but inside isaac Stern often greeted his customers by name. Now the home of the New York Mercantile Company, this is one of the best-preserved cast-iron facades in the city. Its handsome white front gleams the sunlight, and the free-standing colonnettes are decorated with leaves, berries, vines and rosettes, like an Italian palazzo wedding cake.

Miss Gayle cites it as a particular example of enlightened preservation. Buildings like this don't have anythiog going for them except the owners, because this isn't an bistorical district like SnHo," she says.

Walking east toward Fifth Avenue, the tour passes several cast-iron-front buildings of some historical interest. On an airless July evening in 1870, Benjamin Nathan was beaten to death in the still unsolved "23d Street Mur-der" at No. 16, and at No. 14 Edith Wharton was born in 1862.

Lord & Taylor

The Lord & Taylor building, 901 Broadway, at 20th Street, designed by James H. Giles and erected in 1869, is nnw an apartment bouse. Its endlessly fascinating front has been preserved by the present owner, but little of its his-tory or decoration are revealed to the casual, everyday glance. It was the fourth location in 43 years for Lord & Taylor, as the store followed the resideotial and commercial drift oorth. But this building, which Miss Gayle refers to as a "cast-iron palace" and a "French Second Empire extravaganza," was by far its most oroate headquarters.

Much of the Iron frontage along Broadway is gooe now, but over what was the arched entrance to the store a pyramidal tower remains, its mansard roof topped with lacy metalwork and decorated with balustrades and a dormer window. The corner is cut flat across the surface facing the intersection to give more interest.

Along the 20th Street facade of a building that once reached to Fifth Avenue may be found waves of freestanding columns, which together with the deep-set windows and richly scutptured surfaces, create that absorbing play of light and shade achieved by the best of the sculptured iron facades.

Inside, nne of the first steam elevators ran up and down the store's five floors and was such a popular attrac-tion that a divan was added along with the carpeted floor and gas chandeliers.

The fashionably dressed woman of 1881 might wear a "suit of colored silk" trimmed with a scarf "finished with jet bails," made to order for $28. Her boots might have been Pruneila nr Curaçao-kid, and ber cloak an ulster or dragoon jacket in Satin-de-Lyon, satin surah or silk grenadine, There were beonets and lace jabots, muslin, merino or silk underwear and formidable corsets for matrons and their

And in the store's final expansion in 1877, the Fifth Aveoue facade was a cast-iron copy of the first Broadway facade.

W. J. Sloane's, outfitters to rajahs and sailing ships in the 1880's, when it stood across the street from Arnold Constable's, is brick and terra cotta on the Broadway side. But around the coroer, walking east on 19th Street, the tour will see thick molded iron columns with palm fronds, asters and twisting daisies.

'I'll Take Manhattan' Hits Right Note With the Experts

By ALAN TRUSCOTT

The teodency to equate Manhattan with New York City is a delusion shared by many tourists and some bridge experts. Manbattan is the home base for most of the city's experts, and, conveniently for them, for most of its tournaments. They teed to resent any suggestion that they should occasionally play in Brooklyn, Queens or the Bronx, but at least they had never the Bronx.

heeo called on to play on Staten Island. Not, that is, until last week, wheo a Staten Island foursome, seeded 54 ln a field of 58 teams in the first round of the Von Zedtwitz double knockout team championship, found itself drawn at home against four well-known ex-perts, seeded 11th. The preliminary conversation between the home captain and the away captain weot something

And they did. Not unpredictably, the visitors built up a lead of 26 international match points in the first half of the match, though elightly unsettled by some background ooise that turned out to be made by guioea pigs. But the local heroes, Dick Rockstroh, George Wichele Marie Chaikin and Shuart Edele Nichols, Maria Chaikin and Stuart Edel-stein, pulled themselves and struck back on the diagramed deal, the first of the second half.

Both teams reached six spades, io one case after the light-hearted sequence shown in the diagram. A more prudent South would have used Blackwood to make sure that North held an ace, but the resulting contract—an in-ferior one—would have been the same.

In the New York City Opera's worka-day, musically ragged performance of "Cavalleria Rusticana" Tuesday night, one of the new elements was also one of the better ones. This was the singing by Kenneth Collins of the role of Turiddu.

Toast the charmingly the pretinent clues for may merely be Greenan whim the presence in the order. Once Mr. Greenan has us booked on Arnoid's problem, he seeds his story with the most bewildering set of clues to its resolution. Why does Arnold have a cousin who is an identical replica of Arnold? Why is this cousin good at karate? Why does he want Arnold to burglarize the mansion of three sisters who never go out of doors without covering their faces doors without covering their faces with veils? And how are we to distinguish the pertinent clues from what may merely be Greenan whimsey—for instance, the presence in the story of René Beauchamp, who runs himself ragged every day dusting and mopping his collection of dollhouses, or of Barney Slocum's wife, who is put in an "antagonistic mood" every time the attends the opera? Even if we she attends the opera? Even if we wished to, we can't answer all these questions until the very last page of "The Bric-a-Brac Man." And one doesn't wish to, because Mr. Greenan's surprises are too much fun.

> To appreciate just how good Mr. Greenan is at creating an atmosphere in which devils, disfigured ladies, and pathological murderers are not only plausible but amusing, one need only read such a book as William Goldman's "Magic," the tenth and latest novel by the writer who is probably best known at the moment for havwritten the book and screenplay "Marathon Man."

Like "The Bric-a-Brac Man" "Magic" is extremely tricky: It begios with excerpts from a journal written by a character named Fats, who, it later turns out, is a ventriloquist's dummy, who, it still later turns out, is able to keep a journal because he is the other balf of the ventriloquist's schizoid personality.

"Magic" is also fairly gripping. We know something pretty awful is going to happen somewhere up the line be-cause there is a cryptic prologue in which an old man tracking deer in the Catskills comes upon a cabin in which somebody or something is screaming. And Mr. Goldman unfolds his plot so as to keep us suspended between puz-zlement and anticipation.

But when "Magic" is finished and digested, it leaves no aftertaste except for its trickiness. It seems to have been created for no other purpose than to fool us-and unlike good magic its secrets are all too apparent once the performance is over. Whereas the further away one gets from "The Bric-a-Brac Man" the more its special atmosphere solidifies. One might even argue that Mr. Greenan is saying something profound about antiquity and its inevitable corruptioo. But that would be to wax pooderous over a writer who is the very opposite.

Like others, the author sees the bureaucratization of schools as per-haps our major educational problem. "The priorities of our system," he says, "are on administration, at the expense of teachers, children and parents." At the same time, he rejects the approach of Ivan Illich and others who favor "deschooling." Such reformers, be writes, "simply stand the old, miseducational utopianism on its head: where we once imagined, naively, that schools could solve all problems, equal naiveté, that schools are the source of all evil." In fact, he says elsewhere, schools have never been particularly effective instruments for purposes good or bad.

In a positive vein, Dr. Featherstone talks of curriculums that respect the "intuitive" dimensions of science as well as the cerebral side of the arts. He notes that, if nothing else, the unrest of the last decade bas left us with a number of thoughtful people willing to "question the traditional tendency of schools to treat children as passive objects of education, and teachers as passive conduits of curriculum and policy."

At a time when the "back to basics" movement threatens to strip our class-rooms of whatever buman elements remain, such thoughts are welcome. EDWARD B. FISKE

Americans in Paris, 1776-83, Intriguing and Politicking THE VIRGIN DIPLOMATS. By Eimer Bendener, 257 pages. Knopf. $10.
TRIUMPH IN PARIS: The Exploits of Benjamin Franklin. By David Schoenbrun.
420 pages. Harper & Row. $15.

Spawns of the Bicentennial, both these books deal with the American Revolution's attempts to win diplomatic standing and military help in the courts of Europe between 1778 and the peace of 1783. The principals were Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, Silas Deane, Arthur Lee, John Jay and Francis Dana, ali men who became versed on the job in secret intrigue and public politicking.

Elmer Bendiner, covering more ground than David Schoenbrun, does commendable job of disentangling the often-brambled, yet dramatic story of how America pleaded its case abroad. Not only did the American envoys commit blunders out of inexperience, but some of them also permitted their pettinesses to show. Although Mr. Bendiner focuses on the Americans, his book, simultaneously, does justice to such fascioating European diplomats and hangers-on as Vergennes, Beaumarchais and the Chevaller d'Eon. The wonder of it is, as Mr. Bendiner makes clear, that Amer-ica's first diplomats did so well and learned so quickly.

And that they did was owing to Benjamin Franklin, the subject of Mr. Schoenbrun's affectionate portrait Seventy years old when he embarked for Paris io 1776, he remained there for eight years. Wily and wise and almost twice the age of the Revolution's leaders, Franklin charmed the French as he had earlier captivated the British in London. Chinatown, My Chinatown

By FRED FERRETTI

HINATOWN, A QUARTER-MILE square of downtown Manhattan (and growing), is one of those New York enclaves that is somehow special to everyone, for different reasons.

For the elderly Chinese who came to it from the outlying districts of Canton and who live behind the bright callig-raphy in blackened tenements, it is a place never to leave. For the restless. young immigrant from Hong Kong it is often a first port of call, a temporary refuge in which to grow up and to try to change, and finally a place to move away from.

... For the thousands of sightseers who wander through it each year it is a placid, exotic quarter, and for many New Yorkers it is chiefly the place where their favorite restaurants hap--pen to be-and each connoisseur, it seems, has a different favorite.

Chinatown's restaurants are its main attraction, but with the extraordinary rise in popularity of all schools of Chinese cooking, the district has become somewhat of a gourmet shopping center as well.

Chinatown teems from early morning until late at night. Before most of us are awake it sees the arrival of the parade of produce trucks from New Jersey's truck farms. In the afternoon it is the browsers, the children running into the Church of the Transfiguration on Mott Street for their English les-- sons, the men sitting in the doorways and in the merchants associations playing mah-jongg. In the evening it is the lights illuminating the narrow, curving streets, the lines around the restaurants, the night strollers. Chinatown is full of people all of the time.

History

Exactly when the felicitous meeting between Mott Street and the immigrant Chinese occurred has not been docu-mented, but it was probably shortly atter July 10, 1847, when New York got its first look at 35 Chinese newly arrived aboard the seagoing junk Kee Ying.

According to The New York Herald the junk took 212 sailing days to get to New York from Canton and was greeted with great interest by wharfers. merchants and reporters who noted that the paasengers wore "big trousers, loose cotton jackets, small flat caps on shaven tonsures." The junk drew 50,-000 visitors before it left at the end of August, but several crew members jumped ship, Joining them later were migrants from California.

In 1358 a Cantonese named Ah Kcn opened a small cigar store on Park Row and made his home on Mott Street, where he was joined by another cigar-maker, Lee Ah Bow. In 1869 a group of Chinese came from California and began settling in and around Mott Street. This group was notable because it was led by Chu Fung Wing who helped found the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association, still a dominating force in the area's social and civic life.

Waves of Chinese followed from 1872 to 1880 in farmland that is now Pell Street, Dovers Street and the southern end of Mott Street and by 1887 there were prohably more than 1,000 Chinese living in the neighborhood. The first Chioese retail shop, Wo

Kee opened at 8 Mott Street in 1878, and soon others followed. Tea was sold and incense and silks and fabrics. And then, because American food was deemed so alien by the Immigrants, the restaurants began to sprout up. By 1887 seven major and four minor eating places had been established and these began to be popularized and written about by the reporters covering the courts a few blocks south near their offices on Park Row.

By 1900 the Chinese had moved into homes on Mott, Pell and Doyers Streets in large numbers. Many of them comniuted to New Jersey to work in a huge production-line laundry operation in Bellleville, but returned home.

After the turn of the century, Chinese immigration increased markedly and Chinatown's population quickly rose to more than 10,000, but not much higher because of the exclusionary acts thet permitted only single Chinese men to enter the country. Family migration was forbidden, and until the 1940's men far outnumbered women. Today there are an estimated 25,000 Chinese in the Chinatown area, which is roughly bounded by Canal Street on the north, the Bowery on the east, Worth Street on the south and Baxter Street on the west. They run about 200 restaurants, scores of gift and aouvenir shops, several book stores and they publish five daily newspapers.

In recent years Chinese expansion has increased across Canal Street into Little Italy and it is not uncommon to see bean-sprout factories right next to Italian cheese stores.

Strolling

What first strikes the eye of the visitor to Chinatown is the multilevel yellow-stucco and green-tile-ronfed pagoda at Mott and Canal Streets that is the home of the Chinesa Merchants Association. Across the street from it are Chinatown branches of the city's larger banks, all of them decked out with Colinese calligraphic signs.

Heading down Mott Street on the left at No. 64 is the Eastern States Buddhiat Temple of America, a small red-glazed room just off the main en-trance to the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association, which also houses the Chinese Community Center. The temple is atill and incenae hangs in the air. Older people sit about burn-ing joss sticks and praying, and it re-mains open continuously.

Other Buddhist templea in the area are at 7 Doyers and at 4 and 16 Pell Street, although the small one on Doyers is, according to a sign on its door, "Closed for the winter."

The Benevolent Association is one of the cores of Chinese life. It houses the Sunday Chinese language school. It has a meditatioo chapel oo lta second floor complete with a collection of superh antique furniture, portraits of Sun Yat-sen and Chiang Kal-sbek on the walls and the Kuomiotang flag hanging over it all, It also houses, at present, a superb exhibition of photo-graphs of Chinatown's history. It is open from 11 A.M. to S P.M., seven days a week.

Farther along Mott Street, where it meeta Park Street, is the Roman Catholic Church of the Transfiguration, a Georgian-Gothic structure built in 1801, which has been declared a city landmark, it operates an elementary school from kindergarten through the eighth grade, it has special language courses for immigrants and, like the benevolent association, is one of the anchors of the community's life.
At the end of Mott Street, where it curves into Worth Street, is Chatham Square, named for William Pltt, the the Revolutionary War. Looking straight across the square at the tiny triangular block where East Broadway and the Bowery meet is Alfred E. Smith's former house. sharp right turn at this corner and a half-hlock walk to Mulberry Street takes you to Columbus Park, now a children's play area but formerly the site of Mulberry Bend, also called "The Five Points," once the den of thieves and cutthroats.

A left turn up the Bowery to Doyers Street, bearing left to No. 5 Doyers, will take you to the Chinese Opera House, which stood there until 1910 when it was acquired tor the famous Bowery Mission. At the corner of the Bowery and Doyers is Olliffe's Apothecary, dating from 1806, which is the oldest apothecary in the city, and a bit farther north is the Edward Mooney House, at 18 the Bowery, built between 1785 and 1789, which is the oldest towohouse in the city. Restored, it functions as the Chinatown office of the Offtrack Betting Corporation.

Restaurants

Clearly, to single out restaurants in Chinatown is a dangerous thing to do. One person's favorite will be disdained by someone else. So, the dining places presented here are several personal likes, others that have been praised by food critics of this newspaper, and others that have at one time or another been bighly recommended.

Hunan Garden at I Mott could be the best northern-cooking restaurant in Chinatown, Almost as good is Hunan House, at 4S Mott, which has taken over the old Chinese Rathskeller and converted it into a glossy new restau-rant. Across the street from Hunan-House, at 36 Pell is Tung Lai Shung. once one of best of the Peking restau-rants, now pretty good, but not as good as Hunan House because Tung Lai

Shung's cook is at the latter..
Farther up Pell Street are two of tha best Cantonese restaurants in town, BoBo's at 2014 Pell and Macao at 22. Both disdain the new northern hot fads and stay with steamed sea bass, sweet and pungent shrimp and similar fare. Another good basic Can-tonese restaurant is Mon Sing at 6S Mott. And a little farther north, at 75 Mott, is the Mee Heung Chow Main Company, perhaps Chinatown's best-known noodle factory. If the man at the door is in a good mood you'll be let in to watch.

On Elizabeth Street, at No. 18, sits the Mon Heung Seafood House, which ia a Cantonese seafood house that does wondrous things with clams, crabs and snails, not to mention a dish of king crabmeat and straw mushrooms. And almost next door is Hoog Wun which has one of best bargains around—steamed lobster for $6.

Tea Houses

Tea houses dot Chinatown, some new, some old, some small, some exceedingly large. Some are very much like ahort-order counter restaurants, others are like Hong Kong style brunch restaurants, which are becoming quite

The grandfather of them all is Nom Wah, at 13 Doyers. Once it was the first-ranked tea house downtown but it has fallen on desultory days and Is often empty. But it remains an excellent place to have some flaky curried pastries, some dem sem (steamed-rice dumplings) and hom siu gah, little quarter-moon shapes of rice dough stuffed with pork, scallions, shrimps and water chestnuts.

Around the corner at 30 Pell Street, is Hong Gung, a true Hong Kong-style yum cha ("drink tea") restaurant with hundreds of seats and scores of waiters strolling about with hot carts dispeos-ing brunch. The owners of Hong Gung are building still another vast tea house on Elizabeth Street near the Fifth Precinct station house that is expected to seat 1,000 people.

Not as hig, but as crowded, is China Royal on Division Street across the street from the new Confucius Towers apartments. And, of the smaller tea houses, two of the better are Lung Wah at 20 Elizabeth Street, and Mee Sum Mee at 40 Mott.

Shopping

Most of the serious shopping in Chinatown is for food and for utensils with which to prepare it. Souvenir shops abound and most of the things for sale in them are made-in-Japan Chinese gimcracks. But there are two jewelry stores with fairly good quality jada for sale—Mand Wah at SIA Bayard Street, and Chan Lap Ming, at 3 Elizabeth Street. There is also the Tai Heng Lee Company, at 60A Mott, an antiques. porcelain and jewelry sbop which calla itself Chinatown's "Tiffany." There are bardware stores and liquor shops and a couple of minor-league porcelain shops, but most of the food shopping is major-league.

Weighing some bok chay in one of Chinatown's many open-air markets

Open-air vegetable markets bave recently sprung up not only along Canal Street near Baxter Street, but along Pell and Doyers Streets and the Bowery. They also sell fresh fish brought over from the Fultoo Market.

Among the vegetable markets, the Mon Fong Wo at Mott and Pell Streeta is one of the finest. Its vegetables are best early on a Sunday morning and its proprietor, Soon Leong, ia perhapa the most courteous of the store owners along the way, helpful to new cooks and to those aeekiog Chinese cooking gear for the first time. Two fine super-markets with vast selections of goods from mainland China, Hong Kong and Formosa are Kam-Kuo at 7-9 Mott Street and Kam-Man at 200 Canal Street Kam-Man has an extraordinary selection of Chinese hardware on its

Of interest too, is the United Supermarket at 84 Mulberry Street, which specializes in items used by the growing Vietnamese-Chinese community within Chinatowo. There are also a number of good smaller markets such as Wing Fat next to the Church of the Transfiguration and King Chong on Bayard Street.

The shopping area, once confined to Mott Street and its immediate offshoots, has now spread to East Broadway, which sports restaurants, hardware stores, tea houses and, perhaps its most intellectual attractionthe New Asia Books store at 53 East Broadway.

The store has a fine collection of mainland Chinese books and periodicals, superb collections of stencil cutouts and complete collections of all the postage stamps issued by China stoce the revolution of 1948.

Weekend Gardening: Winter Chores

By RICHARD W. LANGER

The half moon was setting when, pleasantly exhausted, I trudged back to the toolshed with my speding fork. It was just before 11. Now the reason I was digging about at that hour of the night was not simply because of the old "there's just not enough bours in the day" syndrome, nor was it solely the sort of moonlight madness that strikes just after Halloween. More than anything, November's nocturnal gardening is a product of the right task at the right time.

By Movember, a summer of exercise in the garden has put me in better shape than at any other time of the year. The soil is at its best for spading: the ripe loam of autumn is much more manageable than the waterlogged muck of spring. And in the cool of the eve-ning, the blood races about one's body in a most invigorating fashion without a concomitant perspiration bath. But above all, perhaps, is the mysterious, almost medieval sura that surrounds one when working the dank soil in the shadowed darkness of a moonlit night— even if some of the mystery has vanished nowadays, when man has dug about up there on the moon as well.

There are other tasks, more mundane, less primitive than spading up a new asparagus patch in the middle of the night, to be considered at this time of year—bedding down for the winter the various internal combustion engines that are used in our gardens, for instance. High on everyone's liat of spring aggravations is surely the lawn mower that fails to operate on that first balmy Saturday in March or April. Then sharp tugs on the atarter cord and countless adjustments to the choke produce nothing but ever increasing invectives panted out in abburgated form between huffs and abbreviated form between huffs and puffs. Then one remembers that in the fall the lawn mower had been casually parked in its corner with a "no use draining the gas tank now, I'll probably need the mower next week" commentary. And then the next needful week hadn't come till spring.

Actually, a lawn mower, or a tiller, or any other internal-combustion-powered device needs only a minimal amount of autumnal care to insure good performance the following spring. First of all, the gas tank must be emptied. The best way to do it is to run the engine until the tank is emptier than that of a hot rod on lover's lane on a Saturday night. Rake some leaves and run the mower back and forth over them while you're waiting for it to run out of gas. You'll accomplish three things at once: ridding the lawn of the leaves, making some nice mulch for the garden, and emptying the mower's gas tank. Please note, however, one almost invariably runs out of gas be-fore all the leaves are mulched up. In the case do not add gas, but go on to the next step.

Unscrew the spark plug — after you've given the engine a chance to cool—squirt a few drops of oil into the cylinder through the spark plug and hole, crank the engine over two or three times, and replace the plug. This will keep the plug from gumming up, the cylinder walls from rusting, and the eogine will be ready to purr into action next year.

While you're at it, remove the air filter and clean it thoroughly. A clogged air filter means poor carburetion, which in turn makes the engine manufacturer very happy, since he will end up self-

Ballet: Twyla Tharp Allemandes Opera: Debut in Right With 'Happily Ever After' 'Meistersinger'

By ANNA KISSELGOFF

Twyla Tharp's newest work for the Joffrey Batlet is called "Happily Ever After." It is an apt title. Miss Tharp is back on the right track. At its premiere Wednesday night at the City Center, the ballet-danced jointly by dancers from the Tharp company and the Joffrey-locked refreshing and innovative, Part of the vitalizing breeze also came from the fact that Miss Tharn invited two longtime country musicians from South Carolina whom she admired—Homer (Pappy) Sherrill and Snuffy Jenkins-to play live on stage with their band, the Hired Hands. The band, which includes Harold Lucas and Kenny Meggs, was augmented by four musicians from New York, and was seated on a platform behind a blacked-out scrim at the back of the stage.

What is "Happily Ever Atter" about? Certainly, it is not about country music and yet in a very large sense there are some thematic threads related to American folk dancing.

Miss Tharp is not offering an imitation of square dancing. Nonethcless, in the first of its four sections, the ballet has a steady insistence on changing partners that recalls a caller's com-mand to switch places and swing your

There is more moonlight than moon-shine in "Happily Ever Afer." In the final section, Rose Marie Wright of the Tharp company, who dances with five men, winds up with a different cavalicr than expected. This remantic pairingoff, with its surprise element, also occurs continually in the first section and could be construed as the even larger melaphor behind country dancing. Square daning is done in couples. but these couples are part of a larger group. When you allemande left and change your partner, all sorts of things can happen. He have learned this from the popularization of real country music that the sob-sister Nashville

Sand has produced. Mr. Sherrill, however, represents a very different type of music—the type of purer folk art that sent the English Country Dance and Song Society into the Appalachians in search of ence-British folk beritage lost to Britain it-

Miss Tharp has managed to abstract that heritage here, Square dancing is a mixture of recreation and skill, and "Happily Ever After" has dancing that offers both looscness and form.

In her jazz pieces. Miss Therp has sometimes trivialized another art form but here she offers more of the skill at distillation that has been claimed for her. Also, she has dropped the seifconscious statements about art and bailet that ran through her recent works, and although the first section still turns cov occasionally, it does not have the sophomoric aggressiveness of, for in-stance, her two ballets for American

Instead, there is a wealth of invention in what is a very contemporary-looking piece. Miss Tharp's torte has always been her compositional patterns rather than her movement idiom, and this time she is in top form. The final section, especially, is a real winner.

This section is also danced terrifically, by Miss Wright and Tom Rawe of the Tharp company, the Joffrey's Gary Chryst in the leading male role as well as three other Joffrey dancers—Rich-ard Colton, Jerel Hilding and William

The movement Miss Tharp has devised are good strong stuff, expansive in spirit and a highly promising break-away from the twitching spastic flickering style that she bas favored.

At times, Miss Tharp plays with the chicken-sound motif of the music: Mr. Chryst struts like a rooster. But the thrill comes in her exciting compositions. She uses canons, fugues, counterpoint repeats, and even skating figures.

The first section is on a smaller scale. more typical Tharp, and danced engag-ingly by Shelley Washington, Mr. Rawe, Jennifer Way and Christine Uchida of the Tharp troupe, ail in Santo Loquasto's fanciful mod costumes. A fourth section, mainly with Joffrey dancers, offered a mirror-like reprise that Miss Tharp has now decided to omit. In between, Miss Tharp herself did a hoofer-like solo. She had every reason to be smiling.

By Eva Marton

One hopes and imagines one will hear a great deal more from Eva Marton, who made her Metropolitan Opera debut Wednesday night as Eva in Wag-ner's "Die Meistersinger."

Miss Marton is a large, handsome Hungarian woman who bas been a member of the Frankfurt Opera since 1972. She has frequently been a guest around Europe and is scheduled to sing at Bayreuth next summer as Gutrune and Venus. She moved with a tair adepiness on Wednesday, and fit in neatly enough with the production. She sang with a tirm command of the language and the style. But it was her voice that gave as much promise for the future as pleasure for the moment.

This is a large, bright evenly produced spinto soprano of the German type. Right now it would seem perfectly suited for Sieglicade, if she chooses to move in that direction, she could quite-likely handle Isolde and Brunn-ilde soon enough. This isn't quite as oure a sound as one might wish; there's a little husk around the kernel of the voice. Miss Marton seems to lack a trill, and she miscalculated the final cadence of the Quintet. But the sound, support and basic technique are there, and one hopes to hear her soon in not only other Wagner, but other German and Italian repertory, as well.

The rest of this "Mcistersinger" had its dull moments, principally because of Sixten Ehrling's plodding routine in the pit. The score has, incidentally, had some 10 minutes cut to finish up by midnight, constituting a retreat from earlier this season, when the opera was given complete for the first time in the company's history.

Norman Bailey, as Sachs, was disappointing-too retiring in personality. lagging behind the beat and afflicted with a cominual beat in the voice. Otherwise, Gerd Brennels was a poor Walther, crudely sung and crudely phrased: Frieder Stricker was an alcrt. unusually aggressive David, and Allan Monk stood out in the smaller part of Kothner. Andreas Brown in his Gotham Book Mart and Gallery, permitting a peek in advance at the display boards he will enter in this weekend's post-card col-lectors' show at the Belmont Hotel. He is talking about the 1900-13 heyday of wish-you-were-here, before most picture post-card albums moved from living rooms to attics. After only two years' experience in what Mr. Brown says is "the fastest growing hobby in the country," his personal collection numbers "10,000 to 20,000." In November 1946, he called "several dozen" enthusiasis lo a meeting at Greenwich House. They founded the Metropolitan Post Card Collectors Club, which now has 600 members—called "deliologists," from the Greek diminutive for writing tablet—and otten gets 250 of them at its monthly meetings.

Mr. Parker feels he hasn't even begun to build his American audience yet, "The first time we went over there, we didn't find our audience, because we were so new. I would think we'd attract people who like Little Feat or the Stones," he said. Aside from rhythm-and-blues classics like Sam and Dave, Mr. Parker cites white blues-rock ensembles like Peter Green's Fleetwood Mac and the Rolling Stones as principal influences.

Others may be repeating themselves in a blues-rock idiom, Mr. Parker tacitly concedes, but he "I think I'm saying new things," he answered with the cocky assurance of the true rocker. "There's a difference between a band like us and a band that is just copying—almost parodying—old styles. I think we're still finding our own way of expressing a similar sort of trip. I think we're making the most progressive music on the placet at the moment, especially on the new album."

Mr. Parker sees no contradiction at all between his serious themes and the buoyancy of his music; io fact, he welcomes the contrast. "It's like there's a sting to the tail of it," he says, "Some of the things I write about are very gloomy. But who wants to feel bogged down by their own troubles? You've got to uplift people and uplift yourself."

another of its frequent shifts. Two years ago the Academy of Music on 14th Street, under Howard Stein's auspices, was the city's principal facility in the 3,000-seat class. Then Mr. Stein disappeared suddenly, and Ron Delsener took the spotlight at the Beacon Theater on Broadway at 74th Street.

This summer Mr. Delsener had a falling-out with the two lessees of the Beacoo, who then proceeded to book their own concerts. Mr. Delsener moved down to the old Academy, refurbished it and renamed the Palladium, and has corralled the main terms being the second to the second terms to t acts for himself.

Now Stephen Metz and Steven Singer of the Beacon bave announced the "closing" of the Beacon. That means they have cancelled the shows they had announced there, although of course the theater still stands and other promoters are apparently free to present concerts there, Mr. Metz and Mr. Singer ere suiog Mr. Delsener, claiming collusion between him and the booking ageocies to freeze them out Until that suit is resolved it looks as if the Beacon will remain mostly dark. Which seems a pity, since logic would indicate that there is room here for two facilities of this type, especially ones so far apart.

In the meantime Sid Bernstein has been engaged by Radio City Music Hall, currently limited by union contracts to an eight-week period beginning Jan. 13 for concerts, to produce pop-music shows there. The availability of Carnegie Hail and the new Avery Fisher Hall for pop is still to be seen. Both halls clearly would like to book as many of their dates as possible for classical acts. But the stiffening competition between the two, now that Fisher is again acoustically respectable, should eventually mean more open dates for both.

Peter Frampton has been signed to appear in his first film, Mr. Frampton will portray Billy Shears in Robert Stigwood's movie version of "Sergeant Pepper's Lanely Heart's Club Band," which is based nn the Beatles album of the same name and other Beatles songs. Mr. Frampton's manager, Dee Anthony, will also act as executive producer of the film, which is scheduled for release during the 1977 Christmas season.

We have all been deluged by Bicentennial music to the point of exhaustion; so many exhumations of 19th-century trivial Americana might well put us off American music forever.

But you should still make a point of hearing a new Angel record called "A Palm Court Concert." by Albert White and bis San Francisco Masters of Melody. Mr. White is a long-time fixture on the Bay Area sceoe. specializing in turn-of-the-century popular music in period arrangements.

The current disk takes its title from the Palm Court of the Palace Hotel in Sao Francisco, once the site of elegant salon music. Mr. White takes mostly old-time tunes (by the likes of Riccardo Drigo, Victor Herbert and Paul Lincke; one of the latter's contributions is the immortal "Glow-Worm") and adds at least one palpable anachronism, the theme from "Upstairs. Downstairs," which sounds completely at home. The arrangements are charm incarnate, and the playing and the recorded sound are as fresh as one could bope for. A guaranteed

What's better than two great years of "Big Blue Marble"?

Three years, of course. So it's happy news that "Big Blue Marble," the widely acclaimed children's TV series, is back for its third fun-filled year.

Every week there'll be fascinating new places to see and new people to learn about. And your 8 to 12 year olds will learn how children in other lands live, play, work and grow up.

Big Blue Marble" has been honored with 13 major awards-including the highly prized Emmy and Peabody Awards.

We're proud to present this outstanding series as a public service. We hope you'll urge your children to watch it. (Better yet, watch it with them.)

Section. A 14 14 14 "Gone With The Wind," a giaot io imperican movie mythology, is coming to television. NBC is carving the film into two parts, the first to he shown Shnday, the second Monday, both beginning at 8 P.M. Clark Gable as Rhett Butler, the role that seemed writteo specifically for him, and Vivien Leigh as Scarlett O'Hara, the role that triggered a worldwide search for the right person, will once again thoroughly enchant the audience with their playing at reoegades and selfish rascals.

in. The durability of the film was illustrated recently io some figures culled from its showing on the Home Box Office pay cable system. More than half the audience that tuned in to watch "Gooe With The Wiod" ooce returned to watch it all the way through a second time. And this is a film that is three hours and 42 minutes long.

NBC will be showing the "complete and unabridged" version but, unlike the cable presentation, this offering will be spiked with commercial breaks if "appropriate places." A network official said the commercial breaks would total the "normal" seven minutes per hour. But the NBC presentation is scheduled to run a total of five bours, leaving a total of 78 mioutes for nonfilm material. That works out to slightly more than 15 minutes per hour, which would seem well beyond the limits of toleration. But perbaps NBC has something more acceptable up its scheduling sleeve.

"Interestingly enough, ABC has decided to compete rather vigorously with the specter of a ratings avalanche for "Gone With The Wind." One of the network's most popular series, "The Six Million Dollar Man," will introduce the added plot fillip of—would you believe it?—a bionic boy. That's at 7 P.M. When young audiences might still control the TV set, and the episode runs until 9, when it will be followed by "21 Hours At Munich," a "docu-drama" about the murder of the Israeli athletes at the 1972 Olympics.

This "dramatized true story," expertly produced, is gripping and terribly disturbing, both intentionally and unintentionally. It has been filmed on location in Munich, to be sure, but "certain incidents and names have been changed." Which incidents? Which names? And why? I am assured the changes are minor, but I found myself questioning many of the key details of this "true story."

For one awkward thing, the tragedy was already a TV special, reported live at the time by Jim McKay, the sports announcer, who also narrates part of this drama. For another, far more unsettling thing, in trying to be "fair" to all sides, the script, written by Edward Hume and Howard Fast, dilutes the monstrousness of the terrorists killing innocent athletes at an eveot supposedly signifying world peace and harmony.

The very process of "dramatization" will have it no other way. The Israeli athletes being held captive are necessarily passive. The Palestinian terrorists automatically become the active protagonists. And as represented by Issa, who is played with burning intensity by Franco Nero, the murderers are given a curious measure of sympathy. Issa only wants to get his two brothers out of jail. In fact, his own mother is supposedly Jewisb. Is this true? The producers say that is what he told Annaliese Graes, a member of the Olympic security police, portrayed here rather glumly by Shirley Knight.

The rest is famous faces playing other famous faces. William Holden, who appears to be laboring under a terrible cold, is Manfred Schrieber, the chief of police. Richard Basehart is Germany's Willy Brandt, Anthony Quavle is Israel's Geoeral Zvl Zamir. And so oo, most of it dooe to a very effective theatrical turn. But perhaps some events should be protected from theatrical turns, from sincere exploitation. The ads proclaim that "there are certain events the world will never forget." What many viewers are unlikely to forget about "21 Hours At Munich," is the heroic death afforded the head terrorist, a death right out of the admirably tough and hair-raising techniques developed to an art by Jimmy Cagney. Something is dreadfully wrong somewhere.

Elsewhere oo the TV schedule this weekend. Martin Agronsky begins a new series on Public TV this evening at 10. The first guests on "Agronsky At Large" will be Walter F. Mondale and Robert Dole, interviewed after the election. And tomorrow at 8 P.M., Channel 13 offers "From These Roots," a frankly positive and celebratory portrait of New York's Harlem, Produced, directed and written by William Greaves, the half-hour finds a Harlem of personal safety and diversity, of Stanford White houses and jazz clubs, of poets and revolutionaries. The program is narrated by Brock Peters.
On Sunday, at 11 A.M., CBS's
Camera Three begins a three-part series about Philip Johnson, the architect.
The interviewer is Rosamund Bernier, whose intelligence and bemused patience are unflagging. At 9 P.M. oo Public TV, Masterpiece Theater will begin a six-episode dramatization of Richard Llewellyn's novel "How Green Was My Valley." Both of these very different projects are warmly recommended, and will be discussed at great-ter length in future columns.

with its lineup. Sandy Duncans come and go, but a Mary Tyler Moore is for-ever. And a Bob Newhart. And a Carol Burnett. If we developed a loyalty oo Saturday night to "M"A"S"H," or "All io the Family," CBS assumed that loyalty was transferable to any other night of the week; without our advice and consent, and CBS got away with it. Programming and counter-programming are, anyway, a form of recombinant DNA research without any Federal guidelines, a kind of snapping of the suspenders of trend. The public would do what it was told to do.

Nor did it seem to matter that characters with whom we had come to empathize were plucked whole from their series and deposited elsewhere; that Valerie Harper and Cloris Lechman vanished from Minneapolis one Saturday night, poof, to reappear the following Monday in New York and San Francisco. Our affections may have been dispersed, but, according to Mr. Nielsen they were not attenuated.

Nielsen, they were not attenuazed.

All that has changed this season. CBS on Saturday night has been roughed up in the ratings. Such bargain basement sitcoms as "The Jeffersons" and "Doc" were doing poorly against "Emergency!" on NBC, and "Mary Tyler Moore" and "Bob Newhart" were barely holding their own against the homoerotic claptrap of "Starsky and Hutch" on ABC. Worse, the flagship sitcom "All in the Famlly," stuck in a Wednesday night swamp with the likes of "Good Times," "Ball Four" and "Alice," couldn't stop people from watching 'The Bionic Woman" and "Baretta."

"Baretta."
Again, poof. "The Jeffersons" and "Doc," startiog tomorrow, are oo longer on Saturday night. "All in the Family" returns, at 9 P.M., brioging "Alice" with it. "Mary Tyler Moore" and "Bob Newbart" have been moved up an hour, to 8 P.M. and 8:30 P.M., to compete with "Emergency!" The Wednesday night hole in the CBS schedule will be plugged with movies.

There are a oumber of things to be said about this face-lift. The Mary Tyler Moore people are known to be upset at having heen plumped down in the middle of "the family viewing period." which might dry up some of their libidinal juices. CBs couldn't care less. Miss Moore has already announced that this is her last season of sitcoms. It was also supposed to be Carroll O'Connor's last season as the besieged Bunker on "All in the Family," but he was talked into coming back another year, and the preferred time slot was obviously his for the asking. One suspects, moveover, that Miss Moore can get away with anything any hour of the day or night; we have forgiven her in advance; she is too perky to be lewd. Besides, anyone who thinks children go to bed at 9 o'clock on Saturday nights doesn't know any children or has been living in Latvia for the last 15 years.

Latvia for the last 15 years.

If, once again, the convenience of the viewer was not consulted—I'm accustomed to my fix of Miss Moore at 9 on Saturdays—at least the message got through to CBS that TV-man does oot live, does not even welter, by laughtrack alone. "The Jeffersons" and "Doc" wouldn't do, weren't worth rushing through a meal for. And even those of us inclined to doubt that "All in the Family" is to American TV what Balzac was to boardinghouses are happy to see it back where It

Why is this? Well Wednesday nights aren't serious. Wednesdays are of no importance. Even Tuesdays and Thursdays, as problematical as they tend to be, are more interesting to days. Wednesdays just a postnasal drip, and deserve woman." Whereas Saturday night vented as a substitute morning church, and to be dren out of the back sea we have forgotten how families, we can at least by watching TV togethe family used to be, or whad hoped it could be.

100 100 100 100

That goes, of course, ; gate families of Miss Mornewsroom) and Mr. Ner office, in the apartment is "real" families (the Bunkers). If we must he and we must, let it be it talgia, and it is. It is ear to be a family at home pretending to be a family do a good job. And time Next fall Miss Moore will have Burnett "family," and nothing familial to do night but read the Kilmonopoly.

Odd though: You me on Saturday night with the room. To watch the yourself is to entertainable loneliness. The wiror, the rug, the potter carton of Chinese foo your dreams. A disemble sound like a speer.

Anxious Wait of Business for Carter's Economic Lineup Democratic and Republican sources as

Shortly after the political conven-tions last summer, when Jimmy Carter was running decisively ahead of Presi-dent Ford in the public-preference polls, a top-level New York banker was asked how he viewed the prospect of a Democratic Administration next January. The Economic of the President, said he did not fear the likely prospect of Mr. Carter in the White House so much as he was concerned about the people he would bave around him in Washington as his key advisers.

The same banker, asked his reaction after last Tuesday's election, replied: "My concern, as expressed then, related to the many groups organized around noble, but often narrow, objectives which see their hopes realized in Federal funding. Those groups gen-erally worked for the election of Mr. Carter and not President Ford. But I have no specific people in mind."

However, he and others in tha business and economic realm are now anxiously awaiting the lineup that the President-elect will choose for the top economic posts in his Administration. Mr. Carter said last night that he would not name any Cabinet officers before Decembar.

Although it is premature to speculate on the cast of performers, a lot of thought has apparently been given for some time to such selections, as well as all the other posts to be filled, by the advisers close to the new President. And, of course, it is already one of the favorite guessing games in business and economic circles. Some of the names listed by various likely candidates for the Treasury Secretary post in the Carter Administration included Robert V. Roosa, who was Under Secretary in the Kennedy Administratioo; Paul A. Volcker, who was in the Treasury at the same time, and A.W. Clausen, chairman of the Bank of America. The name of Felix G. Robatyn of Lazard Frères, chairman of the Municipal Assistance Corpora-tion in New York, was also widely All of them were given high marks, but many believe the New Yorkers are not lifely to be given serious considera-tion for geographical reasons alone. It is not certain whether any of them would be seriously interested anyway. But considerable backing was found for Mr. Clausen, the 53-year-old West Coast banker who is an expert in the international field and has been involved to domestic social-responsibility and urban problems.

For chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, speculation has centered on Prof. Lewrence R. Klein, the chief economic adviser in the Carter campaign: Albert T. Sommers of the Conference Board, also a key aide to the Democratic candidate, and Prof. Richard Cooper of Yale. Although PProf. Klein is considered the most likely choice, several sources doubted he would accept. One source close to the Carter team also suggested that three women in the economic field would certainly be given careful consideration: Carolyn Shaw Bell of Wellesley, who did work for Mr. Carter on unemployment problems;

Ways to Hedge Against a Stock Decline

With the leading business indicators suggesting that the economy has not only paused but also may well have turned down, some investors are seeking a hedge against the possibility of a further decline in the stock market.

Experts in stock options say that one of the best defensive techniques available to small investors is writing call options on shares they purchase.

These so-called "covered writers" sell calls—the right to buy their shares at specified prices for a period of months, weeks or even days.

What they gain by this strategy in an uncertain market is additional income—the "premium," or amount they receive on the sale of the call. They are bedging, therefore, against a decline in the price of their underlying

For example, the purchaser of Avon Products at the recent price of 45 may fear that this stock will continue a decline that has carried the shares in recent weeks down from 50.

An appropriate bedge for purchasers of this and other stocks that bave exhibited recent weakness would be to sell six-month calls. For example, the Avon purchaser could sell the right to buy his 100 Avon shares at 50, with the option to expire in mid-April 1977. The writer would receive a $175 premi-until the option expired, he would get Avon'a dividends for six months—$100 on the 100 shares. Subtract transaction costs on the call of about $25, and the net premium becomes $150. Add that to the $100 dividend and his income becomes $250.

The worst that could happen, apart from a disastrous retreat in the stock itself, is that the writer of the call would be forced to give up his 100 Avon shares at $50—$5,000—less com-missions of about $70. But if be bought his 100 shares at $45—$4,500—his net gain would be $430 on the ahares, plus the net call premium of $150 and his $100 dividend or a total of $680. That's a 15 percent return over six months.

Had the Avon hedger bought bis sbares on 50 percent margin, his leverage would double and he would have a return of around 25 percent after interest charges.

The call writer may even make money on tha stock and keep bis premi-um as well. This would happen if the stock roae to 49. Even at 50 for Avoo, traosaction costs would prevent a call on the shares. Any price significantly higher than that level would, of course, result in a call.

Many investors feel distressed if their shares are called and the stock continues to rise. Once the call is exercised, though, the investor who now feels more bullish about the market generally and his stock in particular can always buy another 100 shares at the current higher price.

Howard Diamend, options specialist at the Fourteen Research Corporation, says that it is even possible for savers to participate in options-preserving their capital while they speculate.

He reasons that the $4,500 invested in Avon could instead be put in a savings bank to earn about $110 in interest over the next six months. That would go part way toward a purchase of a call on Avon at 45. The premium would be $387.50 and the traosaction costs about $25.

Since Avon is a bit above the exercise price-45%, up 1/2 at yesterday's close be has purchased a so-called in-the-money option. In-the-money options generally call for a relatively small premium over the stock's current value.

"In six months, the investor's savings will earn enough to cover 25 percent of the cost of the call," Mr. Diamond said. "His capital is perfectly safe, and he bas found a cheap way to participate in any bull market that could develop for Avon shares."

This technique is especially suitable for volatile stocks, Mr. Diamond said, adding: "Let me stress that the investor need not buy cats and doga for this play. He can buy an in-the-mooey call on Xerox good through January at $60 a share for a premium of $350." Xerox closed yesterday at 60%, up %.

Mr. Diamond concluded that the risk was that the investor could lose his entire stake or that the atock might not rise above 63½, where be would break even. If the stock does spectacularly well, though, the leverage is considerable.

If you need 90 day money fast and your bank makes you see 90 people,

At Marine Midland, we realize that a slow bank is a bank that's not working hard enough for you. That's why our system is built for speed.

For instance, most of our loan officers have the power to give approvals on their own signatures. So we won't slow you down with a lot of conferences and calls and committees.

Another step we take is making sure our local people have a grasp of the community as well as the country. Over the last 125 years, we've learned how to anticipate local needs, whether they're seasonal or long term.

Besides that, a Marine Midland loan officer makes it his business to know your business. In fact, chances. are that he already has experience in your industry. There's a good reason for this. Having the most branches in New York State gets us involved in practically every business in New York State.

So no matter how fast or how long you need money. just tell it to the Marine.

prompt many concerns to set up ESOP's. Among them are at least a dozen oil companies, including the Exxon Corporation and the Mobil Oil Corporation. "Why not take advantage of the tax windfall?" asked Everett Allen, vice president of Towers, Perrin, Forster & Crosby, a consulting firm.

By contrast, he said, a labor-intensive company—a major retailer, for instance — finds little appeal in a tax incentive tied to capital spending. The benefits would be "ridiculously small amounts," Mr. Alleo said.

Mr. Allen also said he douhted whether even capital-intensive companies of substantial size would find ESOP's worthwhile without the tax credit. For a large public-held company, an employee stock plan generally is not an important capital source, be

Using Other Methods

In his view, other objectives—such as bringing employees into the shareholders' ranks and instilling a closer sense of identity with the companycould be met as well, or better, with convention compensation techniques. Porfit-sharing and thrift plans are already common, and both types of pisns permit investments in the employer's

Typically, large corporations set up ESOP's in addition to—not as a substitute for-existing benefits. Such is the case at the Union Oil Company of Californla. For years it has given its employees Union Oil shares through a profit-sharing plan, and oow it also has an ESOP, a company spokesman

According to Hewitt Associates, a consultant firm based in Deerfield, Ill., the new tax-credit benefits are so minimal for small companies that even those that already had an ESOP usually pass a new one up because they are unwilling to accept the added restrictions such as immediate vesting of employee interests.

Though Hewitt Associates finds "a lot more discussion" of ESOP's than actual steps to set them up, in theory an ESOP has numerous intricate uses. It can be used to redeem a major shareholder's stock. A company also can spin off a division to the division'a employees by selling it to an ESOP created for the newly severed concrn. An ESOP can pay cash for another company's assets, then exchange them for the employer corporation's shares. Most commonly, an ESOP gives a company a sudden infusion of cash by buying its shares. Typically, the plan, hacked by the company's guarantee, borrows the purchase price from a third-party lender. The employer's an nual retirement contributions-which are tax-deductible-pay off the loan.

Basie Retirement Plan

At a small company, unlike a major corporation, an ESOP is more likely to be the basic retirement plan. It is often questioned whether employees should have their retirement security tied up in their employer's stock.

Peter F. Drucker, the management consultant, "recently csiled ESOP's "financially unsound to the point of recklessness." Writing in The Public Interest, a quarterly publication, he contended that more than 6 companies in 10 decline in financial health during a typical employee's 40-year career span.

"Employes might indeed be 'capital-ists'." he argued, "but fewer than half would ever get a decent pension."

Though opinion is by no means all bearish, some specialists question whether raising capital through an ESOP's borrowing is as attractive for a company as it appears. The shares that are issued dilute earnings, Mr. Allan noted, and dividend requirements pre-sumably grow. Also, according to John E. Balckcom of Hewltt Associates, the ESOP's borrowing "Is a fixed commit-ment like any other." In bad times, It can drag the company down.
W. Robert Reum and Sherry Milliken

Reum, in a receot Harvard Business Review article, found that an ESOF borrowing compared poorly with a direct borrowing by the company or a direct sale of the stock. "Paying debt with pretax dollars through the classic [ESOP] sounds good, but it is bad finan-cing," they concluded. In the Reums' view, an ESOP's real importance lies in transfers of ownership, such as redemptions of retiring officers' shares.

Mr. Levy, a dynamic figure in fundrsising as well as high finance, became the senior partner and dominant leader of his firm following the death in 1969 of Sidney J. Weinberg.

Smooth Transitioo Is Expected

Unlike the inside bickering that often affects Wall Street houses—for example, the infighting at Bache & Company, now Bache Halsey Stuart, after the death of Harold Bache—the transition from Mr. Levy to the new leadership is expected to run smoothly. Among the 1,500 employees and at its 14 domestic and foreign efficient teamwork is a hellmark that brills offices, teamwork is a hallmark that built Goldman, Sachs to its present eminence in the competitive investment world.

Mr. Levy, known to associates "Gus," was instrumental in expanding the scope of the management committee, which added two regional members in 1974. "Gus did not want a one-man firm, an associate said. "He sought to make sure that the death of a single person would not stand in the wsy of the growth of Goldman, Sachs."

One source said that after Mr. Levy auffered a stroke, eight days before his death, Mr. Weinberg and Mr. Whitehead (who served in 1973 as chairman of the Securities Industry Association, a powerful trade group of the hrokerage husiness) were named co-chairmen on an acting basis. The plan, this source sald, is to make the designations permanent and public at an appropriate time.

Other members of the management committee are: Howard R. Young, 58; George E. Doty, 58; H. Frederick Krimen-dabl 2d, 48; James P. Gorter, 47, and Thomas B. Walker Jr., 53.

of national economic policy. He maintains close liaison with the Fed and the other départments of the Government on national and international economic affairs, and with financial officials of foreign governments.

. . . One of the great uncertaioties in the economic area is the future role of 71-year-old Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Fed. His present term as chairman extends until Jan. 31, 1978, and he has given no indication that he intends to give up the post. However, it is uncertain how the Carter Administration feels about his continuance in it. There is little doubt, though that the business and financial world.

in general, regard him bighly. There have been only four chairmeo of the Fed in the last 35 years, and they do not normally resign with the induction of a new Administration. It was reported that Thomas McCabe did it in 1952, but President Harry S. Truman did not act on his letter. And it was reported that William McChesney Martin offered his resignation, orally, to President John F. Kennedy in 1961. It was not accepted either.

Nevertheless, in Congressional testimony, all of the Fed chairmeo have expressed support for legislation that would make the terms of the Fed chairmen coincide with the four-year Presidential terms. There would bave to be a new law to eccomplish that. At present, a vacancy on the Fed occurs only every other year, in the even-numbered years. If vacancies occurred in odd-numbered years, it would give a new President the opportunity to select a new member of the Fed and designate him as chairman.

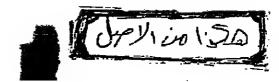

This would oot mean an end to the Fed's traditional independence, but it would afford the President the opportunity to have a man at the helm of the central bank with whom he could work and to whom the Treasury Secretary would have no difficulty conveying tha Administratioo's economic thoughts candidly and fully all the time.

One of the Carter group's high economic aides suggested that a likely modus operandi in the oaw Administration would be a beavy relianca on the old quadriad idea for establishing eco-nomic policy—close cootacts among the Secretary of the Treasury, the bead of the Council of Economic Advisers, the head of the Budget Department and the chairman of the Fed, on a regular basis. -

Rhode Island authorities have ambitious plans for their new industry. The white clapboard former admiral's residence sitting empty on top of a small hill is intended for the local petroleum club. Two or three years down the road, they estimate, 2,000 oil workers will be on scene and, et some point, Rhode Island even hopes that the spidery production platforms will be built

But potential obstacles loom. For one thing, while the oil companies maintain that they bave chosen Davisville be-cause it is the most quickly usable facility, at 12 hours by slow boat, it is too far for a permanent supply poiot. For another, Rhode Island faces competition from its neighbors-oearby New Bedford, Mass., for example, is sending local workers to the Gulf Coast for training in oil production.

And from the ouset, most of the oil

Offshore Oil Drilling Reviving Rhode Island Base

the successful bidders have already begun to cootract with companies who are specialists in exploration. Th ebiggest bidder, Exxon, the nation's largest company, has hired Western Oceanic Inc? of Houston to bring the Pacesetter III drilling rig.

The Pacesetter, like all the other rigs planned for this wave of drilling, is a "sefi-submersible," meaning that, while from above water it resembles the familiar flat production platform, actually most of it floats beneath the water, anchored by long cables. From this perch, it can produce as many as two dozen wells by boring into the ocean floor at different angles.

Another semi-submersible, the Fedco , visited Rhode Island some time ago when two "cost wells," designed to bring up the rock samples that provide the companies with clues to the oil and natural gas possibilities, were dug.

That operation left behind oil-spill cleanup equipment belonging to Clean Atlantic, a consortium of the drilling companies, which functions, in the case of an oil spill, like a fire department at a fire. The equipment is rushed to sea, where plastic booms are used to contain the flowing oil while a auction device, looking like a giant vacuum cleaner, draws it into a separator. The oil is saved and the water poured back.

And even as the companies prepare to drill in the Baltimore Canyon Trough. they are looking ahead to the Georges Bank Basin, another promising oil and gas location east of Cape Cod, where one cost well has already been completed and another is tentatively planned for late next month.

In anticipation, a supply ship, the Calico Jack, arrived here yesterday and the Ocean Victory, yet another semi-submersible, belonging to the Ocean Drilling and Exploration Company, is on its way bere from the North Sea. At 254 feet high; when it arrives oo Nov. 18 or so, it will have to be submerged by 70 feet to pass under the nearby Newport Bridge.

Theory That Rewards Are High

The state is leasing the facilities to the oil companies for a trifling sum, on the theory that the rewards are high Most of the supplies oeeded by the oil companies—fresh water, fuel oil, groceries, hardware ranging from clamps to calle and telepted machinclamps to cable and talented machin-

The decline to 5.01 cents a pound from yesterday trading was to be limited to liquidation of contracts. Therefore anyone wanting to buy a contract or sell a contract could not do so unless he already held a position and was reversing the process.

sion explained that there were more than 1,075 contracts outstanding and that, while there was no shortage of Maine potatoes, there was a shortage of freight cars. The commission noted that the were only 150 cars available in Maine and that each outstanding contract covered 50,000 pounds of potatoes or the equivalent of one freighter-car load.

The commission action followed its recent approval of a revision that will recent approval of a revision that will re-

Heinz Adding Gravies and Chili

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY

The H. J. Heinz Company, the pickle and ketchup king, last month expanded two new products out of test marketss, hoping for the success that has eluded its grocery products division for about while its regular business has been expanding, its new-products ventures in that period have generally not been successful. There's been Great American Soup, Happy Soup, Heinz Salad Dressings and Help fruit drink.

The new products are Homestyle Gravies and Chili Fixin's, the advertising for which is being done by the ing for which is being done by the Leo Burnett Company, a major Heinz agency.

What almost doomed the first group to failure before they were even started, David W. Sculley, director of newproduct development, explained yester-day was that "they were aimed at large, well-developed, bighly competi-tiva categories where consumer satisfaction with existing products on the market were relatively high."

market were relatively high."

The new entries were a result of an analysis begun two and a half years ago of "some dull, static, relatively uncompetitive categories."

Heinz felt, Mr. Sculley told a meeting of the New York Chapter of the American Marketing Association, "that the dullest category in the eyes of most marketers, was perhaps the ripest for innovation."

Once the categories were decided on

Once the categories were decided on, the company conducted taste testing of existing products and found "high levels of consumer dissatisfaction."

The fear assigned to the project, made up of people in marketing, market research, and research development, decided that what was needed was a bigh-quality, ready-to-use gravy line in resealable glass jars, and a prod-uct that contained all that was needed for chili except the meat, also in a

Only after this was decided and the ideas accepted by consumers was the roafter turned over to R. & D. to come up with recipes.

To get a fix on the products' volume potential and potential consumer atti-tudes toward the products and bow they would be used. Heinz retained the Data Development Corporation, which used its Sales Wave Technique and got the products into homes in seven widely separated markets. This was before the labels were even designed.

Mr. Sculley had come to Heinz from Lever Brothers after the food compa-ny's management had been reorganized, partly because of the new-product failures.

While normally it takes from three to five years to develop and test a new product, the new Heinz management directed him to develop and put into test three major new products in 18

In 16 months he had done it. The third product, Basic White Sauce, he said, "performed well amoog triers but failed to generate an absolute high enough level of trial to be crowned. a major success at this point."

The Homestyle Gravies — brown, chicken, mushroom and onion—having passed their test in Portland, Ore., and St. Louis—bave been expanded to the Heinz grocery districts of Buffalo-Rochester-Syracuse; Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Columbus, Ohio, Cincinnati-Dayton, Ohio and Detroit.

Chili Fixin's were tested in chili country—Omaha Neb. Phoenix, Ariz, and Nashville, Tenn. — Birmingham, Ala. Now distribution is also including Dallas, Memphis, Kansas City, Atlanta and Los Angeles.

After six years as executive vice president, Richard S. Sevice president, Richard S. Se-clow, 46 years old, has been promoted to president of Geer, DuBois. Peter Geer, 47, presi-dent since 1965, has moved up to chairman and remains chief executive officer.

Mr. Seclow, once a brand manager at Lehn & Fink, worked also at Ogilvy & Mather and at Carl Ally Inc., where he was a senior vice president.

The theme for the gravy is "tastes so good you'll be proud to call it your own" while the chili product's is "Home made chili made easy."

Most of the advertising for both products is in spot television, but centsoff coupons, or coupons good for samples, are being distributed through the mail and newspapers.

Mr. Sculley was the luncheon speaker for the day-long A.M.A. seminar on predicting the marketing performance of new products before they are put on the market.

Linden Davis, senior vice president-research of McCaffrey & McCall and conference chairman, noted that such forecasting techniques can help weed out "losing propositions" before going to test markets, which can be both time-consuming and expensive—an average of a year and from $250,000 to

Champion of Research

A. Edward Miller, president of Downe Communications, might have a strong research background, but that doesn't mean he thinks research is the be-all and end-all.

As a matter of fact he suggested last night to a class at the New School for Social Research that those blggies in marketing and advertising who are neglecting personal insights in favor of inanimate research are missing an im-portant dimension in the decision-making process.

"I still believe in research," he said,
"You should believe in research. You will be more successful if you do. It doesn't necessarily mean 20,000 interviews. It means taking the time and

The Secretary Lagos State Tenders Board

Effective today, the 1977 AMC Gremlin price has been reduced $253 down to $2995.

Here's why AMC is taking this action.

For a number of reasons, the small car market has substantially contracted during the last two years.

This has hurt American Motors which is exclusively a small car producer.

Due to increases in costs, small car prices have risen over $1000 in the last five years.

These price increases have driven many small car buyers out of the market place.

In order to convince these buyers to return to the market and look to American Motors, we've reduced the price of the 1977 AMC Gremlin by $253.

What's in it for AMC?

By reducing prices we expect to significantly increase our sales volume to offset the effect of the price reductions. In fact, we are banking on a 30% increase in Gremlin sales.

What's in it for small car buyers?

This reduction in Gremlin price means that now the AMC Gremlin lists for $254 less than Chevy Vega and for $104 less than the Ford Pinto Pony.

The	base	list	prices	are	as	follows:
G	Gremlin			$2	995	*
Vega			$3	249

$3099

Compare Gremlin's performance.

Pinto

Gremlin gives you a 6 cylinder engine as standard equipment for superior acceleration to pass at city or highway speeds. The Pinto and Vega come standard with 4 cylinder engines.

The Gremlin has a wider track for greater stability, and at 2806 pounds Gremlin has more road-hugging weight.

Compare room and comfort.

Gremlin has the greatest overall width for more hip and shoulder room. Gremlin also has the longest wheel base which combined with its wider track and road-hugging weight gives you a smooth, stable ride.

Compare Gremlin's versatility.

The Gremlin is no ordinary 2-door sedan. Only the Gremlin comes standard with a big wide hatch, fold down rear seat and even a carpeted cargo area, making the Gremlin a great small car for people who use a car for more than just transportation.

*Manufacturer's suggested retail price. Destination charges, dealer prep, state and local taxes, other options extra.

But that's not all you get. The limited edition Audi isn't a stripped down car. In addition to the special options, it's loaded with standard features you might have to pay extra for

And, of course, all Audis give you the excellent performance and handling characteristics of precision German engineering.

Like front-wheel drive, for greater tracking and cornering. Rack-and-pinion steering, the most direct type of luxury car loaded with so many options can move.
